A televised tour of the new facilities of St. James Mercy Hospital, Hornell, featured dedication day last Sunday. The rolling TV camera shown here picturing a baby on the monitor screen as it looks into the nursery window (left) visited five other departments carrying scenes by closed circuit to patients and guests throughout the hospital. Father Richard Tormey and Sister Mary Valerian (right) provide audio description of the nursery as technician Jerry Hugg operates the camera. Photo on right: Aux. Bishop John E. McCafferty speaks at the dedication ceremonies in the hospital lobby. Mother Mary Alphonsus, President of the hospital Board and Mother Mary Bride, Superior General of the Sisters of Mercy, who run the hospital are seated left.

Bishop McCafferty Officiates at Hornell

Hornell—"A hospital, in many ways, must be like a home," explained Auxiliary Bishop John E. McCafferty officiating last Sunday at the dedication of the new West Wing of St. James Mercy Hospital in Hornell. Nearly 100 people crowded into the lobby of the new wing to hear the Bishop, the seventh and final speaker of the formal ceremony.

Prior to the traditional affixing of the crucifix to the lobby wall, the Bishop pointed out that, like a home, a hospital must give to its inhabitants physical comfort, companionship, spiritual consolation, and the Mayor, spoke for the community.

A highlight of the dedication was a standing ovation for 89-year-old Sister Mary DeSales, who though now retired, has been affiliated with St. James since 1900. Sister was present at the program.

Following the formal ceremonies in the lobby, patients and guests "went on tour" via closed-circuit television—of the emergency department, the new maternity ward, the physical therapy department, and the main lobby. Competent staff members were on hand with nurses and students to explain the facilities.

The third floor of 44 beds has the most up-to-date hospital equipment available, according to Sister Mary Rene, administrator. It brings total capacity to nearly 160 beds.

Patient call-backs are one example of the wing's modern outfitting. Microphones, which also house controls for television sets installed in each room, will allow patients to tell a nurse on station what they desire. This enables the nurse to know what she should take with her.

Also, a central board at the nurses' station is automatically programmed for emergency priority or non-priority calls. The patient will signal the one that applies, and this information will appear immediately on the board.

If the nurse is taking a non-priority call, and an emergency call is registered, she will be immediately switched over while the first call holds.

Other new facilities include pneumatic tubes connecting all departments and nursing stations in the hospital to one network. Prescriptions, as well as messages and laboratory specimens will be delivered through the tubes.

A cart system, revised with the new wing and equipment, will facilitate supplying floors with linens. Each room has a closet opening both from within the room and from the hall. Linens will be deposited from the hall each day, where nurses will have them in easy reach for bedding changes. Later, soiled linens can be picked up for the laundry, all with a minimum disturbance to patients.

A new Occupational Therapy room and a new Physical Therapy Department, equipped both for adults and children, are a part of the new wing. The latter houses an exercise gym with all kinds of equipment for work with various disabilities. Some of the equipment includes a pulmonary function testing, an artificial limb center, and a whirlpool bath. The Pharmacy, Speech Therapy Section, Purchasing Department, and an area for decontamination and sterilization are nearby.

The entire wing is air-conditioned, has humidity control, radiant heat and special alarm systems, and is equipped with three elevators.

The several weeks of preparation that preceded the event were under the supervision of Sister Mary Rene and the public relations director, Mrs. Edith McGuckian.

The new DeSales classroom building and a new Medical Center—both immediately across the street from the hospital—were also open to the public for inspection.

Federal government funds provided $1,145,000 of the equipment for the new wing; the remainder, $1,600,000 for the project was either donated or borrowed. St. James Hospital, owned and directed by the Sisters of Mercy, is fully accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals. It is accredited by the National League for Nursing and certified by the State Department of Education for its nursing school, the smallest in the state.

Ithaca School Hopes To Stay Tuition-Free

Ithaca — Parishioners of Immaculate Conception Church here will be asked to continue parish support so that the parochial school can continue an 85-year-old tradition of providing tuition-free Catholic education.

Beyond this, the board agreed, "the future would have to depend also on some financial assistance other than general parish funds."

Maintaining non-tuition, the board feels, "allows many children to continue in the Catholic school who otherwise would find it financially impossible."

New officers of the Parish Council presided at a council meeting Sunday night. They are Peter DeWysoki, president; Charles Dvorak, vice president; and Margaret McCann, secretary.

His address is the second in a two-part discussion of the topic. The first lecture was given Thursday, Oct. 2, by Dr. Harold Taylor, former president of Sarah Lawrence College.
