Anti-Smoking Series Fizzles

By PAT COSTA

"Why You Smoke — A Self Test," a series of five programs seen last week on Channel 21 proved to be a disappointment.

A production of National Educational Television, made possible through a grant of the American Cancer Society, the series introduced employees of the Washington Gaslight Co., who were concerned about their smoking.

With the help of a psychologist, Dr. Daniel Horn, director of the National Clearing house for Smoking and Health, the group, through tests and discussions, learned various facts about their smoking habits.

The series chose to follow three people in particular through their daily routines: at home, on the job and at play with their families. All three were heavy smokers.

During the self-tests, which were made available to television viewers, the company group learned various things about themselves.

Some learned that handling of the cigarette was a big part of the enjoyment of smoking. Others discovered that smoking was both a stimulant and a tension reducer.

Their attitudes toward the hazards of smoking were brought out as well as their attitudes towards the esthetics (or lack of) of the habit. Consideration for the examples they set youngsters were a factor as was rating themselves on willpower to stop.

Main complaint here was that the series seemed sketchy with the part-time narrator failing to offer comprehensive explanation of what was going on.

I took a couple of the tests but when the psychologist who devised them failed to interpret results I lost interest as certainly other viewers must have.

Finally at series end, only one of the three persons whose smoking habits were closely followed, reported on her personal results.

The program did sum up the number of persons who had stopped, cut down or had not changed their habits, but Channel 21 viewers did not get to hear it — at least not at the 7:30 p.m. screening. The local educational station cut in with a promotion for another smoking program to be seen the next night blocking out the NET finale.

The local followup to the NET series seen in the "Saturday Night" slot ran for 45 minutes and was about as illuminating as the national production.

A Rochester surgeon and internist met with a group of Greece residents who had taken part in a clinic sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

All but one of them had stopped smoking after attending the clinic and he had cut down considerably as well as becoming better aware of the health hazards involved.

Those who had quit told about their reasons for stopping, including fears for themselves and their children. Some reached back into childhood to tell of first smoking sessions and others discussed reasons why they had continued for so many years.

On the whole, however, the discussion never seemed to rise above the level of a bull session.

TEENAC

By FATHER MARTIN

Dear Father,
One of my best friends has suddenly changed. We used to get along beautifully. But lately she seems to contradict everything I say, or makes fun of me in front of people. It's getting so bad, I hate to be seen in public with her as she has embarrassed me more than once.

I have brought these matters up to her, and she says she didn't mean to hurt me, that she was only kidding. But the next time we were together, the same thing happened, she made some cute remark that made me look silly. I don't want to lose her as a friend, but I don't enjoy being with her any more. How can I make her see she is ruining our friendship?
Cherly

Dear Cherly,
I don't know what more you could do if you already brought the matter to her attention. You could ask her what's bugging her. Maybe she has some problem you could help her with. Or you might tell her if this continues, you won't accompany her to places where you are with friends, so that she won't have a chance to embarrass you.

Sometimes a person will resort to cute remarks because the person is insecure or jealous of the attention given to another person. Or the person might want to be the center of attention. But in the long run, no person profits by cutting down another person, especially in public.

Try to bring the matter out

HOW TO KEEP LENT

THE HOLY FATHER'S MISSION AID TO THE ORIENTAL CHURCH

With the season of Lent, comes the question, "How can I best keep Lent?" The answer is we must make sacrifices on our own and nothing is a sacrifice unless it hurts. What will be your sacrifice? ... Just think of the missionaries in our 18 emerging countries who keep Lent all year long. Sacrifice something big this year. When helping others hurts a bit, you know you've made a sacrifice.

FEED THE HUNGRY
In India, our priests and Sisters subsist on ounces of rice each day so they can share what they have with lepers and orphans. $10 will feed a family for several weeks at least. $50 will feed five families. $100, ten families. ... Only $975 gives a priest a two-acre 'model farm' to raise his own food and teach his parishioners how to raise more food. Archbishop Mar Gregorios will write to thank you.

TRAIN A SISTER
Enable a girl to become a Sister. For 41c a day ($12.50 a month, $150 a year, $300 altogether) you can pay in full for her two-year training, have a Sister 'of your own.'

HELP A CHILD
For only $10 a month ($120 a year) you can make sure that an abandoned child has food, clothing, a blanket and love. ... We'll send you a photo of the boy or girl you 'adopt.'

MASS FOR LENT
Our priests will offer promptly the Masses you request. Do you wish to remember a loved one this Lent? Your Mass offerings are usually the only income our priests overseas receive.

JOIN THIS ASSOCIATION
Enroll yourself, your family and friends in this Association. You will be helping Pope Paul in one of his most ambitious and heartfelt works, while sharing in the blessings of thousands of Masses. (The offering for one year is $2 per person, $10 for a family; perpetual membership is $25 per person, $100 for a family.)
