An Easter Nest Cake

A cake that looks like something else has special appeal for little children. This Easter nest begins with half a cake mix baked in a one-quart ring mold. It is covered with apricot frosting and coconut, and the eggs it holds are made of uncooked fondant.

The frosting recipe:

1 egg white
⅓ cup light corn syrup
¼ cup apricot jam
Few drops almond extract

Beat egg white until stiff but not dry. Combine corn syrup and apricot jam; gradually beat into egg white. Continue beating until frosting stands in firm peaks. Fold in almond extract.

Double the recipe when making a standard two-layer cake.

Uncooked fondant:

⅓ cup margarine
⅓ cup light corn syrup
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 pound confectioners sugar, sifted

Mix margarine, corn syrup, salt and vanilla in large mixing bowl. Add sugar all at once. Mix all together — first with a spoon, then knead in dry ingredients with hands. Turn onto board and continue kneading until mixture is well blended and smooth. Makes about 1½ pounds candy. Divide and tint with various vegetable colors. Shape into eggs. Store in cool place.

The Saturday Mass ...How It's Going

Rescheduling the Sunday Mass obligation to Saturday is causing the problems Bishop Hogan hoped it wouldn't.

In an informal survey of 17 parishes this week, the Courier-Journal discovered decreased attendance in the churches that did not schedule a Saturday Mass. However, churches that did reschedule reported only a minimum of growth in weekend attendance and income.

The reason offered for the discrepancy was that the new scheduling was still in its fledgling state; it was too early to determine long range effects.

While the pastors asked told the Courier that the majority of lay comments on the new scheduling was favorable, the reaction of some of the clergy was less than enthusiastic, and one pastor was reported to be forthrightly condemnatory. The latter was said to have told his congregation that attendance at the new Saturday Mass did not satisfy the Sunday obligation. "Pope and bishops to the contrary," his colleague chuckled.

One pastor described himself as the "man in the middle" over the Saturday Mass. He has not rescheduled the Sunday obligation, "but I may be forced to," by declines in income and attendance.

To ease the possibility of rivalry in Mass attendance, all the pastors of a Rochester suburb recently decided to inaugurate the new scheduling together. Polls were taken in the individual parishes, however, and, by the preference of the laity, the times of the Masses will vary from parish to parish.

Several pastors reported feeling that one church in a given area or community was sufficient for the Saturday Mass. This reason was given only by pastors who either do not expect to, or will not schedule a Saturday Mass.

Many pastors reported they will inaugurate the new scheduling in the near future. All of these expect to begin about Easter or shortly thereafter.

One of the stipulations Bishop Hogan placed on granting permission for the Saturday Mass was that pastors realign their Sunday schedule, dropping one Mass.

One pastor who has a Saturday to the priests in the new scheduling included allowing more time for the Sunday Eucharist, thereby making for greater community participation and more meaningful liturgy. He also noted that parking lot problems were eased.

Lay reaction has been generally favorable, but mild. Most of those polled expressed a preference for attending Mass on Saturday, citing convenience as a reason.

One pastor wha has a Saturday Mass reported two negative reactions. "One man came up to me and said, 'Remember Thou, keep holy the Sabbath day,'" the priest said. "And one woman told me that she went to Mass on Saturday, but still felt she had to go again on Sunday morning."
