

New Enemy for GI in Korea... Culture Shock

Seoul, Korea — (NC)—“Culture shock” and a high rate of drug use are producing a rate of psychiatric hospitalization of U.S. Army personnel here that is three times higher than it was during the Korean war, according to a U.S. Army psychiatrist.

Maj. R. Paul Penningroth, M.D., director of the new U.S. Army Mental Health Clinic scheduled to open here in June, said the hospitalization rate is higher than it is in any other place where the U.S. Army is stationed, including Vietnam.

“Culture shock,” he explained, is the inability to cope with a new set of culture codes and mores in a strange society.

“When thrust into a group of people who have different behavior patterns, many of us cannot understand our new surroundings, and sometimes turn to drugs, alcohol and women,” Penningroth said.

“And this can lead to further complications ranging from drug addiction to dealing in the black market to support their girl friends.”

No statistics have been released on drug addiction among GIs here, but Penningroth admitted it is “considerable, due particularly to the easy availability of drugs here in Korea.”

Korean law has a blind spot as far as the sale and use of narcotics are concerned. Marijuana is openly sold in every village where U.S. military compounds are located.

Penningroth continued: “In Korea, there are stresses and temptations on the soldier without the unifying goal or spirit that is present with the soldiers in Vietnam to help alleviate these problems.

“With little being done to prevent trouble and a shortage of professional help, these problems create a high rate of mental problems among soldiers here.”

Penningroth said that the Surgeon's Office of the U.S. 8th Army here recognized the increasing need for local treatment of mental cases and then came up with the idea of setting up a clinic at the Army's headquarters in Seoul.

“The idea behind the clinic,”

he said, “is to allow the doctors to get at the problems when they first happen, and to prevent them from becoming more serious.”

‘Living’ Chalice

This unusual and rugged chalice was designed and executed for Msgr. William Ryan, president of Seton Hill College, by Gary Jurysta, assistant professor of art. The cup is made of brazed copper, the stem is an old grapevine root and the base is a brass-plated steel plate. The interior is smooth and gold plated. (RNS)

Why call a national nursing service?

When you need a nurse to live in or help out, the service you call has a lot to do with the kind of nurse you get.

We've been a respected nationwide personnel service for almost a quarter century. So we're fussy about the qualifications and experience of every RN, LPN, aide or companion we assign to a case. We make sure the nurse you get from Medical Pool is second to none both in ability and attitude.

We're big enough to handle every detail of insurance, taxes and payroll without troubling you.

Be sure. Call... 454-4930
