Spain Easing Restrictions

Madrid—(RNS)—The Spanish government is expected to ease its compulsory National Service Law restrictions on military conscientious objectors, allowing them to serve in special non-combat units.

At present, men refusing to perform 18 months of military service face stiff jail sentences. According to a law draft approved by the Spanish cabinet, conscientious objectors may spend up to three years in special units. The draft law is awaiting approval by the Cortes (parliament).

About 150 Spanish members of Jehovah's Witnesses have been jailed for refusing to carry out their armed service obligations. They face continual jail terms because the government can imprison them repeatedly for the same offense. One Witness has already served 11 years.

The new draft law provides for the pardoning of objectors now in jail.
