

One of Six Now Goes Camping, Many in Modern Camper Units

Remember when you and a buddy once pitched a pup tent for an overnight stay beside a stream in the woods a few miles from home and thought it was great?

Camping out, you called it. Now you may be among those families who pull a travel trailer or camper vehicle to woods many miles from home and still think it's great.

Outdoor living, we call it now.

One of every six North Americans is now a camper, according to best estimates. For an inexpensive family vacation that offers relaxation and a place to stay in nearly all areas of the U.S., Canada, and even foreign lands, camping is hard to beat.

Camping Grows

Whether the camping growth is a result of the vast array of equipment available, or whether the public's interest in learning to camp brought improved equipment is moot. But there is agreement that interest in camping has grown to unbelievable proportions in the last 25 years and the boom continues.

It is now a year around activity. The popularity of skiing, snowmobiling, ice fishing and other cold weather sports, together with better equipped vehicles, has helped to make camping enjoyable the year around in the U.S. and Canada.

Camp grounds have been increasing in the U.S. and Canada at a rate of about 1,000 a year, providing about 25,000 new sites annually. A large number are private. These offer fine accommodations to campers willing to pay a little extra for their outdoor living.

Ten years ago they could be counted in the hundreds. Today there are more than 3,000. While some are modest, others are on the posh side, offering swimming pools, recreation facilities, supervision for children, clubhouses, and guided excursions to points in the area.

In National Parks

The U.S. government now has developed camp grounds and more primitive camping areas in 30 national parks and more than 150 national forests, including wilderness areas where there are no roads and vehicles are pro-

The family pauses momentarily while driving through Callaway Gardens, Pine Mountain, Ga., for dad to make pictures, while on its way to nearby state park. Facilities for setting up its camper trailer, towed by an International Travelall, are conveniently available.

Wise Driver Keeps Fire Extinguisher In Car; There is No Substitute

The wise motorist carries a fully-charged fire extinguisher in his car at all times. When you need it there is no substitute.

The preferred extinguisher is the stored pressure dry chemical type. This type can be used on any kind of fire and does not create toxic gases as do vaporizing liquid types. It should have at least 2½ pounds capacity.

Two kinds of such extinguishers are available. One uses a throw-away refill cylinder. The other must be taken to an extinguisher service shop for recharging. Either is suitable.

The extinguisher should be reserved for emergency use only. If you intend to use an extinguisher for other purposes, such as putting out a campfire, carry spares.

SEVEN OUT OF EIGHT

More than seven out of eight cars built today are equipped with automatic transmission, eight-cylinder engines and radios.

Your new car will self-destruct in three years.

It doesn't matter what car you buy. It's still going to be eaten away by rust, unless you do something about it right now.

Have it totally rustproofed by Ziebart. (No, your car is not rustproofed at the factory and undercoating alone may do more harm than good.)

Rust usually starts in those hidden areas where your car's unitized body is boxed in and welded together. And rusting hits usually started by the time your car comes off the showroom floor.

Special tools and factory-trained men see that Ziebart sealant gets at these seams and welds and sealed-in places. And our 5-year or 50,000-mile guarantee against rust will make sure that your new car won't self-destruct before it's even paid for.
