The Tree Man of RG&E

Should you plant an Oak, a Birch or a Norway Maple? We have a man who knows. His name is Frederick Michia. He's a professional arborist. There is very little he doesn't know about trees and landscaping.

And he's a consultant for Rochester Gas & Electric. Perhaps you've heard Mr. Michia speak before your garden group. Or maybe he has worked with your town board, presenting proposals for street and park beautification. Fred's tips on tree planting at intersections have improved visibility and traffic safety for many of our communities.

Over the years, Mr. Michia has helped RG&E beautify many of its substations with colorful trees and shrubs that hide electrical facilities and provide a pleasant setting for power equipment installed above ground.

Fred Michia advocates common sense in tree planting. Years of care and grooming can be wasted if a tree grows too tall under power lines or its roots interfere with buried gas and water lines. His suggestions have given RG&E sound direction in its efforts to help beautify the greater Rochester area.
