

Hardest Job of Year for Your Car Is Coming Up, So Give it a Break

It may be a vacation for you but it's most likely your car will do the hardest work it's had to perform all year. So, when you go into the Great Outdoors this year, give your car a break.

Like a human being, a car that has remained relatively inactive all year tends to get out of condition. Those short trips to the office and the market and Sunday visits to Aunt Ida tend to keep the engine out of shape.

Carbon deposits build up and engine components deteriorate. The engine becomes sluggish and during extended vacation trips a peppy, responsive engine is a must.

Visit Service Station

For dependable performance during your vacation trip, visit your favorite service outlet for a thorough tune-up and engine check.

Here are the basic ingredients of such a tune-up as outlined by Champion Spark Plug Company. Such services are vital to good performance, especially if you've driven 10,000 miles since your last tune-up.

□ Install new spark plugs. Inspect spark plug wires and boots. Test cranking, starting and operating voltage.

□ Install new ignition points and condenser, set distributor dwell angle and timing. Check compression. Test charging rate of generator or alternator.

□ Test coil output. Check distributor condition. Clean and inspect distributor rotor and cap.

□ Perform any necessary carburetor service. Replace air cleaner element. Check and replace, if necessary, anti-pollution devices.

□ Check battery and cables.

Having these services performed before your trip will help avoid a variety of troubles.

For example, if your car is generally garaged, it has been protected from the elements. On vacation trips, it is likely that your car will be exposed to the elements overnight. Should rain or condensation be heavy, chances of hard starting are increased unless the ignition system is in good working order.

Can't starts aren't the only penalty from an engine in need of tune-up. High-speed highway passing situations demand the ultimate in engine responsiveness. Tests show that a tuned car can pass almost 10 percent more quickly than an untuned vehicle.

Save on Gas

Finally, the cost of an engine tune-up will be partially defrayed by the savings in gasoline. Tests conducted by Champion show that better than one gallon per tankful can be saved by a freshly tuned engine.

When leaving for that adventure in the great outdoors, by all means make sure your tires, brakes, steering system and other vital to safety items are in good condition.

But don't forget the tune-up to make your car as eager to go as the family is.

Consider the Kids And Their Needs In the Outdoors

Moving into the great outdoors with dad and mother becomes a great adventure of discovery for the youngsters who will want to take their toys with them and bring back treasures they've collected along the way.

All of which requires a bit of planning to avoid loss of favorite playthings, and to provide for bringing back their treasured nature finds.

Mothers, to the delight of dad, will find the transparent, plastic containers with seals, with which they are so familiar as Tupperware, contributing order and safety to this problem.

Toys for the youngsters, to keep them safely occupied on outdoors days — indoors — are available also from Tupperware for toddlers to pre-teen-agers. By way of example there is the "Zoo It Yourself" and the "SnaPics," the latter plastic tiles that snap into place to make many different pictures.
