Mission Directors Meet

Albany — The challenge of development for the Third World today presents a unique responsibility to Christians, especially those Christians who are blessed with affluence and economic gain, said Msgr. Edward T. O'Meara at a meeting here of diocesan directors of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith.

"It is precisely this challenge that gives purpose and urgency to our work as directors of the society," Msgr. O'Meara, national director of the society said.

The conference was at the invitation of Bishop Edwin B. Broderick of Albany.

The vital role of the Roman Catholic Worldwide Missions, and the urgency for obtaining greater support of the U.S. Catholics were the key topics for this three-day workshop, attended by Father Joseph F. Reinhart.

"We are not committed to world development for economic or political gain; we are not merely humanists being anthropologists to our fellow man by providing educational, medical, and social development; but we are the bearers of the Good News, witnesses to God's Incarnation and Redemption present and active in the world of men. In truth, we are Twentieth Century apostles of Christ," Msgr. O'Meara stressed.
