No Stars For 'Myra'

New York — (RNS) — The movie, "Myra Breckenridge," is so bad that the New York Daily News fears that the city's Sanitation Department may well go on strike during its first run here. Critic Wanda Hale devoted all of three inches of copy space in describing the film as "a disgusting business," "in poor taste" and a "vulgarity."

Over the years, the Daily News has given one-star ratings (**** is normally "superb") to some stenchy films on the charitable assumption that the Hollywood dark room crew had done a fair job of developing film that might well have been kept out of the camera. For "Myra Breckenridge," the News came up with "No Stars."

The New York Times dismissed the film with 10 inches of copy that indicated Myra had collapsed "like a tired, smirking elephant with no place to go." Gore Vidal, the writer who developed what could have been a good two-minute poker party joke into a bestseller novel about sex change, refused to recognize the Myra put out by Hollywood. The critics applauded his decision.
