

Holy Days No Longer Holidays

Parochial school children used to excite envy in their public school friends on certain special occasions. Take Hallowe'en—no school next day for the Elect, and they enjoyed rubbing it in, too.

Times have changed. Holy days no longer will be holidays; school will be in session, in the morning, at least.

"It is easier to make a holy day truly a holy day," when school is in session," a school office memorandum states.

A special program for each holy day can make it a "memorable event" leaving a "lasting impression," the letter observes. Scripture services and special Masses arranged with the children, retreats, assemblies and parties are among the suggestions for feast day celebrations.

Practical reasons for this departure from tradition concern bus schedules and the time of special visiting teachers. Moreover, the letter mentions, if these holidays are eliminated, parochial school pupils won't be flaunting their freedom in the playgrounds of the neighborhood public school.

In the last few years, the number of "no school" holy days had dwindled to three—All Saints, on Nov. 1; Immaculate Conception on Dec. 8 and Ascension, in May. The latter two are school days in the calendar suggested by the school office.

But by great good luck, there will be no school on the day after Hallowe'en, anyway. All Saints Day, 1970, falls on Sunday.

Order Cuts Back Schools

Providence, R.I.—(RNS)—The Brothers of the Holy Cross will cease operation of four Catholic high schools in Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania in June 1971.

The decision to withdraw was made during a meeting of the order's Eastern Province in July and was announced in a letter to Bishop Russell J. McVinney of Providence.
