

ADVICE TO WOMEN

who DRIVE... and MEN, Too...

from DeDe BENSON... a woman who does

Dear DeDe:

My boy friend, Larry, has a horrible habit of being late. His boss is mad because Larry's forever coming in late to work. I am angry because he's late for dates. Last week we had tickets to a hit play and we missed the entire first act because Larry wasn't on time.

He claims his car has starting trouble. He says he keeps getting the battery charged and he's even replaced the battery, but it's always the same story.

Do you think it's just an excuse and that he's really lazy and inconsiderate?

VEXED VICKIE,
Camden, N.J.

DEAR VICKIE:

Larry may be inconsiderate but it's probably of his car's engine, not you. If he has charged and replaced his battery and still has starting trouble, then something is likely draining the battery. It could be that Larry's car needs a tune-up.

Clue him in and tell him to talk to his favorite mechanic and get to the root of the problem before his boss and you sever your connections.

Dear DeDe:

My best pal, George, owns a repair shop, so naturally I take all my car repair business to him. I insist on paying full price for the work he does but I certainly don't expect my buddy to overcharge me. I recently had George fix my brakes and the bill came to over $60. The very next day I saw an ad in the paper offering a complete brake job of $30. Do you think this is fair?

MELVIN Y.,
Hamilton, Ontario

DEAR MELVIN:

Without knowing all the details on the service bill, it's difficult to say. I suspect your friend George is giving you a decent deal but that he's better with the wrench than with the public relations.

Depending on the condition of your brake system, the bill could vary. The advertising special was probably just for new brake linings and adjustment. If your brake system was really neglected, George probably had to service or replace brake drums, brake shoes, cylinders and hoses. I am also sure that George used the best quality material available for his pal. With most or all of these services you got fair treatment.

Next time you step on your brakes and stop in time to avoid a close call, you may agree with me that George is the best friend you have.

Dear DeDe:

My girl friend Patsy is a seat belt nut. I drive carefully so there's no danger of collision. Yet she insists on wearing her seat belt. That way she can't snuggle up to me on a date.

FRANTIC FRED,
Ventura, Calif.

DEAR FRANTIC FRED:

Don't let this girl get away. She's got brains for two of you. Maybe the reason you drive so carefully is that you are not distracted by a snuggling girl friend. And just because you watch it, doesn't mean some other driver may not plow into you. Remember, a belt around the waist is better than a belt in the mouth with a shattering windshield.
