

SARAH CHILD
All In The Family

The poet James Russell Lowell extolled the virtues of the sixth month of the year, asking "And what is so rare as a day in June . . ."

Obviously, nothing—unless it is a day in May.

According to my "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations," there are 40 plus memorable poetic lines about the "merry month of May," indicating that the poets and I agree.

Next most written about month is April but you know how they feel about it—T. S. Elliott calling it "the cruellest month."

No, it is May that inspires the tender lines, a May day like one we experienced last week.

When Shakespeare refers to the "darling buds of May" I know precisely what he means. The winter had been so long, so arduous, so coy in disappearing that this May day seemed all the more perfect.

There on each tree and bush for all the world to gaze upon were tiny green growing things, so new that their greenness was yellowish.

Above, a blue sky and bright sunshine dazzled the eyes while the warmth of the air invited the doffing of coats and the lowering of convertible car tops.

At our house, the old forsythia bush showed the wisdom of massive pruning last year with a display of yellow bloom. The hyacinths both purple and yellow waxed full and lovely in the front yard. The tiny red primroses held forth in the back and on the east side the blue woodviolets and the new rhubarb were a delight to the wearied eye.

So what that the kids each changed clothes three times during the afternoon, each time attempting to reduce the amount of covering to the barest minimum.

So what that the mud in the bordering woods is still fresh and clings to legs and arms and elbows with tenacity that soap and water will never have.

It's May, Beautiful, warm, awakening May. Let the kids and flies flit as they will.

Imagine a coeducational school that offers small classes individualized instruction, flexible curriculum and motivated teachers who care about every students progress

You just imagined Manlius Pebble Hill School

Manlius Pebble Hill, located in suburban Syracuse, is a unique school. Our total learning environment is purposely structured to create for each student an atmosphere in which to achieve. Our classes are ideally small, so each student receives all-important personalized attention. Our curriculum—strong in English, Mathematics, Language, Science and Social Sciences—is extremely flexible, enabling each student to develop at his own best rate. And our teachers really care. Their deep personal motivations are expressed in their classes and their personal counseling after school hours. Perhaps this is the biggest reason why all Manlius Pebble Hill graduates have made college entrance in recent years.

Discover the many advantages of our unique boarding program with the options of weekends at home. The girls boarding program is for grades 9-13; boys boarding is for grades 7-13. For the girl or boy who needs that extra pre-college year, ask about our 13th year postgraduate college preparatory program.

We are now enrolling for the fall 1971 semester and for the Manlius Summer School-Camp, which opens July 7. Call or mail in the coupon to have us show you how your child will benefit most from Manlius Pebble Hill.
