Diocesan Officials Disappointed Over Legislature's Work

As the State Legislature draws to a close with no floor action (as of Monday press time) on two bills of interest to Catholic voters, two diocesan spokesmen expressed disappointment but urged continued effort in support of the legislation.

As of press time, no floor action had been taken on the Parent Aid Education Bill or bills to repeal the abortion bill.

Father Daniel Brent, superintendent of schools, expressed distress "that the parent aid bill has not had a fair hearing."

"The leadership seems to be working in secret on some form of aid," he said, "but it has kept the parent aid bill bottled up despite tremendous popular and general legislative support."

Indications are that the Legislature may act on some form of nonpublic school aid by the time the Courier is delivered and Father Brent commented that "passage of any aid bill would be welcome in that it would at least show that the state recognizes the worth of nonpublic schools. It would indicate that the legislature is at least trying to do the right thing.

"But I must stress that I believe that the parent aid bill is the correct approach. It reinforces parental rights in education and has legal precedence."

The superintendent saw some irony in the fact that in the very year when the 18-year-olds received the right to vote the state leadership is ignoring the efforts of so many young people on the school bill.

"It must be a bit disillusioning for them," he said, "and perhaps even more of a shame that at least secondary schools are not getting help when so many high school students worked for it."

Father Robert Collins of the Family Life Bureau expressed some surprise at the issuance of the Brydges bill to restore rights to the unborn.

"It seems to be basically the same as the Donovan Bill," he said, "and I understand because of Brydges' position (majority leader in the Senate) it may come to the floor instead of Donovan.

"If no action is taken or if the proposals are defeated in the closing days of the session, I urge all concerned about abortion on demand to continue to work for its repeal. If the Legislature is still in session when the Courier is delivered I urge telephone calls to legislators to rescind our liberalized abortion law."

A spokesman for the State Catholic Committee in Albany said that no matter what happens, the committee will push for parent aid and repeal of the present abortion bill.

"Starting now," he stressed, "and continuing right up to and into the next session."

Not Whistling

A burial ground holds no terrors for Father Tony D'Alton, 31, who uses West Park Cemetery in Johannesburg, South Africa, as his training ground for his activities as a pentlathon specialist.
