Regional Divisions to Be Aired

All meetings will begin at 8 p.m. Laymen who miss the meeting in their own region may attend any other meeting.

Tentative plans for the governing structure in each region; and the financing of its own projects for solving its own problems, will follow the settling of which parishes are properly related by region to work out mutual issues together, Father Shamon said.

Meeting the current school crisis is the immediate target of the regional planning. Each regional unit would decide on the manner of consolidation of schools where necessary, the coordination of all religious instruction programs and planning of adult education programs and teacher training in its own area.

In a short while, Father Shamon indicated, the supra-parochial concept of cooperation through regionalism would help other phases of diocesan activity, such as the establishment of a diocesan pastoral council after parish boards are functioning, furthering of liturgical renewal and promotion of the Human Development Campaign.

In each region pastors and parish boards would keep full autonomy and responsibility for matters purely parochial. Through representatives on the regional board of their area they would participate in discussion of all regional problems and share the solution.

A unique feature of the Monroe County groupings, Father Shamon said, is "an out-reach program in each region which will involve voluntary inter-parish sponsorship of one or two inner city parishes." Each region also includes a major Catholic high school which will be asked to share regional projects.

Bishop Hogan Ordains 5 Jesuits

Bishop Joseph L. Hogan ordained five members of the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) to the priesthood last Saturday, at St. John the Evangelist Church in Greece.

Three of the newly ordained are members of McQuaid Jesuit High School's first graduating class, the class of 1958; and two are former teachers at McQuaid.

The McQuaid graduates are Fathers J. Peter Conroy, Paul W. Nohelski and Alfred E. Caruana; the McQuaid teachers are Fathers John F. Walters and Richard Hunt.

MERCY BARBECUE

The seniors of Our Lady of Mercy High School will have a graduating celebration with their parents at the school on June 6. A chicken barbecue will be served from 5 to 7 p.m. and will be followed by entertainment presented by the seniors, highlighting music, modern dance, and poetry. There will also be a slide presentation, according to class president Judy Hemming and class moderator Sister May Kay Gilligan.
