SARAH CHILD All In The Family

Travel is educational as anyone can tell you. And as we started out on a 10-day foray, station wagon packed to the roof with three kids sandwiched in, we fully expected to be Educated, that is.

And we were. We were.

For example, we learned that if you let the baby (year and a half) sample root beer and chocolate bar in late afternoon and then pull her high chair up to a Pennsylvania Dutch family style meal she is almost certain to lose her supper in front of eight perfect strangers.

We learned that if you let the 3-year-old and the 6-year-old go through a cafeteria line just ahead of you with their own trays they will almost certainly choose balanced meals. If a hunk of watermelon on one end of a tray and a slab of chocolate layer cake on the other don't balance, I don't know what does.

We learned that even if you've found the most perfect stretch of seashore between Ogunquit, Maine, and Luquillo Beau, Puerto Rico, it is still not wise to wait until the sunburn begins to hurt before calling it an afternoon.

There were other lessons waiting for us. Among them: Motels featuring ice machines, soda pop coolers, colored television and wading pools may spark more interest in youngsters than sighting a Great Blue Heron or watching a tern dive for its supper.

• A mosquito is a mosquito wherever you go. The insect has no more charm on Assateague Island than it does in Rochester.

• Vacationers who arise at 6:30 a.m. daily and are on the beach by 8:30 should realize that they will be ready for bed by 7 p.m. at the latest.

• Finally, suburbanites who fail to hire a boy to mow a lawn during their absence should be prepared to return home to find a hayfield where their front yard once stood.

CDA Officers

The Catholic Daughters of America, Court Our Lady of the Cenacle #1139, installed new officers at the last meeting of the year, June 15, at St. Philip Neri School Hall.

Mrs. Virginia Everett, district deputy, installed the new officers who are: Mrs. Nelson Schum, grand regent; Mrs. Henry Tallie, vice regent; Mrs. Conrad Wolf, vice regent; Mrs. William Guilfoil, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomas Crews, financial secretary; Mrs. Carl Hendrickson, treasurer; Mrs. Joseph Buttaggi, monitor; Mrs. Albert Lenhard, lecturer; Mrs. Joseph Oca, organist.
