Look for Student Lamps with Better Light Better Sight Tag

Studying is one of the hardest and most important things you child does. Did you ever stop to consider how much he depends upon his eyes for studying? It has been estimated that 87% of all we know about the world comes through our eyes. To help prevent eye fatigue and drowsiness during a study session, good lighting is essential. The Better Light Better Sight Bureau six years ago set up standards for proper study light. Any lamp which meets these requirements, no matter who manufactured it, carries a tag that states, "This is a Better Light Better Sight Bureau Study Lamp."

BLBS Lamp Tag

Some of the requirements a lamp must meet to qualify as a BLBS lamp are even distribution of light over the work surface, minimum and maximum light levels, the absence of glare, shadow and annoying reflections on the work surface, and the amount of upward light. In order for any BLBS lamp to be effective, however, a 200 watt bulb must be used. Desk lamps with a BLBS tag have to be placed as shown in the picture — on the opposite side of the working hand, using the indicated measurements. If left-handed, place the lamp on the right side of the desk.

Proper Use of a BLBS Lamp

Various Styles Available

The BLBS lamps are available in various styles and colors. While the most popular so far has been the desk lamp, wall lamps and hand-some floor lamps are also available. You can choose from metal bases, to orange plastic bases and from a cloth shade to a molded plastic shade.

RG&E does not carry BLBS lamps. They are available at the following stores:
