

Auxiliary Bishop John E. McCafferty delivers homily at annual Red Mass.

Bishop McCafferty Says Red Mass

At the annual Red Mass Sept. 12, celebrated at St. Joseph's Church in Rochester, Auxiliary Bishop John E. McCafferty told members of the legal professions that prisons are "behind the times."

Moved to depart from his prepared text by the revolt of inmates at Attica prison, Bishop McCafferty said events there should "bring to the forefront of our own concerns" the cause of penal reform.

Bishop McCafferty told those attending the Mass that because crime exists, "measures must be taken," and pointed out that the failure of social restraints means that "unfortunates will deviate."

"At the same time," he said, "we desire not the death of the sinner but the death of sin."

Citing the Gospel account of Joseph of Arimathea, Bishop McCafferty said, "do not let the hour for action pass."

In the prepared text of his homily, Bishop McCafferty compared the law to the healing professions. Its major function, he said, is to protect life.

"Life . . . must be protected at all times," he said, and asked lawyers to work out new legal approaches to nuclear weapons and genetic manipulation.

CYO Ready to Open Membership Drive

The 40th annual CYO membership drive begins Oct. 4, according to Arthur J. Bamann Jr., CYO board president. Several hundred volunteers will participate in the two-week recruitment.

Anthony M. Gramza has been named chairman. Gramza is assistant vice president and mortgage officer at First Federal Savings and Loan Association, a member of the board of trustees of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and a member of the board of directors of both the Home Builders Association and the CYO.

Bishop Joseph L. Hogan is honorary chairman.

CYO is a youth serving agency offering the greater Rochester community more than 40 programs for boys and girls, men and women. Race or religion has no bearing on membership.

Its newly redecorated facilities at 50 Chestnut St. include two gymnasiums, an olympic size swimming pool, a jogging track, an exercise room, paddle ball courts, and authentic sauna baths.

During the past season, over 20,000 boys and girls between 5 and 18 participated in a CYO Program.

Many new programs begin this fall: The Midtown Health Club for men and women will offer more hours swimming and slimastic and physical-fitness classes.

CYO Funspot Program for children offers after school swim and gym and special interest programs. Bus service is available for participants.

CYO Back Door Club will hold Friday and Saturday evening dances 7-10 p.m. for any area youth organization and will provide the transportation.
