Word For Sunday

Sunday's Readings: (R1) 2 Sm. 5:1-3. (R2) Col. 1:12-20.

From now on, the last Sunday in the liturgical year is always the feast of Christ the King. The First Reading reminds us of Israel's greatest king, the lowly and holy David -type and symbol of Christ the King. The Second Reading tells that the subjects of the King are rescued from the kingdom of darkness and brought into the kingdom of light through the blood of His cross. Luke's Gospel dramatically describes the King shed-ding His blood to save us for His Kingdom. With the sign "King" hanging over His head, Christ is asked by a criminal, "Remember me when you enter upon your reign." Jesus answers, "This day I will take you to my Kingdom."

I see controversy waging over a rock opera called Jesus Christ Superstar. It could be called Jesus Christ SuperKing. For the constant theme of Super star is the concept of Christ as King. The Gospel at Mass uses the king idea in a sarcastic, ironic way. The soldiers standing around the cross mock, "If you are the King of the Jews, why don't you save yourself?"
The cross and the thorns are ironic emblems of throne and crown. The inscription is sar-castic, "This is the King of the

The rock opera plays on the irony of the king-concept in the same way as the Gospel narra-tive. In the opera Herod sings a bouncy song in vaudeville style challenging Jesus to prove His kingship. He sings:

> "You are Christ, the Great Jesus Christ-

Prove to me that you're no fool:

Walk across my swimming pool

Prove it to me, And I'll let you go free! Come, on King of the Jews."

To Herod, Christ's divinity and Kingship were ridiculous. But were they more so than to modern man in our affluent, sceptical society?

I remember seeing Superstar played by the original cast: Fenholt, Elliman, and Anderson. It was reverently done. In the audience of 10,000, it was perhaps for some the first time an evening was given to anything about Christ.

As I left the auditorium after the production, some young men were passing out leaflets. They read:

"Superstar asks a lot of questions—about the man who called himself God. And the collective voice of society answers back JC was a great man but he had no plan.

He was Superstar but he carried it a bit too far.

He doesn't relate and he never will.

WAS HE REALLY just Superstar or was He the very SON OF GOD?

WAS HE AS CONFUSED as we make him out to be or was he one who REALLY knew where it's at?

WAS HIS DEATH just all there was or was there SOME-THING MORE? like REAL LIFE?

If you're sincerely searching for TRUTH, for Meaning in life, please call us. We'd like to get together and tell you about Jesus— our Lord!"

You know, I was deeply impressed by this reaction to Superstar. Instead of condemning it, these young evangelists used it as a launching pad, as the edge of the wedge to talk-ing about Christ.

Today, there is so much talk of losing our teenager for religious education. Could one of the reasons be that instead of seeking bridges to them, we are unwittingly building walls?

Pope Paul in his Pastoral Instruction on the media has written:

> "Often parents are dis-turbed by the frankness with which the media treat every question, including the problems that face both the civil government and the Church. Naturally they wish their children to use the media in a proper manner. Nevertheless, let them TRUST THE YOUNG BECAUSE THEY HAVE BEEN BORN AND HAVE GROWN UP IN A DIF-FERENT KIND OF SO-CIETY. Because of this, they are better forearmed to meet the pressures that come from every side." (#70)

Sacrifice Is do not fit his? The Key Word

Guest columnist Msgr. Mc-Ghan (Courier-Journal 11/3/-71) has said the secret word, sacrifice, regarding the support of Catholic schools. If we really want them we must be willing to open wider our own, not the state's, wallets.

Priest Has 'Cultic Role'

Bishop Hogan's article "The Priesthood in Crisis" (Courier Journal, 11-3-71) leads me to the following dilemma: Today's priest must either keep his 'cultic role' or lose it.

His primary function has to be preparing his fellow Catholics for "eternal life." He surely cannot do this for those who neither possess the Catholic faith nor wish to. Concern for non-Catholics would reveal his secondary function, namely, to assist these non-Catholic brethren that they might get ready in this world for "eternal life." The "cultic role" of today's priest includes those two functions and excludes every other.

On the other hand, should today's priest seek or find any other than his "cultic role," he is surely losing or abandoning it. A physician or psychiatrist or the member of any other secular profession plays no "cultic role" per se. It is not the obligation of those occupa-tions to replace those that pre-pare -souls for "eternal life." Our Blessed Lord answered the dilemma for me. "No man," He said, "can serve two masters." How can any priest faithfully play his exclusive "cultic role" which no other man can play and still serve as God wants him to? Or why should a priest want to share such a role with those worldly other roles that

'Music Bag' Defended

Editor:

In the (Courier-Journal 11-10-71), Father Cuddy, in his column OTRS, made a slighting reference to the Mission Singers. In defense of the "Music Bag" I should like to say that I see a greater manifestation of the Christian virtues of humility compassion, and love in just one column by the Mission Singers than I do in 25 of Father Cuddy's reactionary ramblings. As far as I'm concerned, "The Music Bag" is the Courier's finest column, and I hope you continue to carry it.
