'Inherit the Wind' To Open at Mercy

By ANN KALASKA
Mercy Correspondent

"Man wasn't just stuck here like a geranium in a flower pot; that living comes from a long miracle, it just doesn't happen in seven days."

So states Bert Gates, (stage name), a biology teacher in a provincial southern town in 1925. His views of evolution shocked the staunch citizens of Hillsboro, causing chaos and heartbreak, making the Bible's words "he who troubleth his own house shall inherit the wind" ring true.

The North will provide background music.

In addition to writing conventional poetry, Hanna has created a new type of poetry that does not adapt to the printed page. His poetry has appeared in a number of small literary magazines and has been anthologized in Double-day's anthology "Quick Aging Here."

This fictional version of the Scopes Monkey Trial, "Inherit the Wind" by Jerome Lawrence, will be the first play presented since the Mercy-McQuaid drama department merger. Father William J. O'Malley of McQuaid will direct the joint endeavor.

Performances will be Nov. 18-20 at 8:15 p.m. in the Mercy Auditorium. The admission charge is $2 with no reserved seats.
