

Education Workshop

Speaking to religion teachers from five parishes, Father Ronald Harley makes a point during the question period. The workshop, held Sunday, Nov. 21 at St. Louis parish in Pittsford, brought in teachers from St. Thomas More, St. Jerome's, St. John of Rochester and Our Lady Queen of Peace for a talk, grade-level meetings, Mass by Father John Phillips, and a buffet supper.

'This Is Nation Time,' SCLC Audience Told

This is "nation time — time to end polarization between the races" a black congressman told a Rochester audience assembled by the Southern Christian Leadership Conference.

The ballot box must be used to solve America's problems, the Rev. Walter E. Fauntroy declared, and the audience affirmed this in a standing ovation.

Mr. Fauntroy, the District of Columbia's sole representative in Congress, addressed 450 people at the Flagship Nov. 5, at a $25-a-plate fund-raiser for the SCLC.

"In this coming year of the ballot," he said, "there will be 25 million new voters between the ages of 18 and 24. If they will just vote, they can determine the outcome in 31 of 33 Senate races.

"We've got to start marching again, and I mean marching on ballot boxes."

Mr. Fauntroy criticized black militants and young whites for "doing a lot of talking and not organizing the vote."

"You can't pull off a revolution by blowing up a toilet in the capitol," he said. "You're not hittin' on nothing. It is nation time. It's time to end polarization between the races, and that won't come about through radical rhetoric. It comes about when people are willing to work like we did in Birmingham, Ala."

The congressman recommended establishment of an annual minimum income, saying:

"We in this country have a way of espousing capitalism for the poor and socialism for the rich." Rich oilmen get "public welfare" under the guise of "oil depletion allowances," Mr. Fauntroy said, "while rich farmers are paid not to plant crops. But when we look at the poor we say 'Laissez-faire capitalism. Let 'em make it the best way they can.'"

Specialist on Soviet Affairs Optimistic on China's Role

By BARBARA MOYNEHAN

A specialist on Soviet Affairs and member of the editorial board of the New York Times has expressed optimism at the admission of Red China to the United Nations.

"China has now joined the world community," Harry Swartz said, "I am optimistic of the representation of 800 million people, participating now in the world dialogue."

In a recent press conference before addressing the third session of Rochester Institute of Technology's seminar series for local business and industry executives, Swartz admitted that all nations naturally look out for themselves, but quoted Winston Churchill's sentiments on the importance of dialogue among countries: "It is better to jaw, jaw than war war."

He predicted that China and Russia will now be competing for the neutrality of the U.S. Since they are border neighbors, they will now think of the U.S. as a secondary danger.

It is for this reason, Swartz said, that President Nixon will have good reason to claim he has done a lot for foreign relations.

He doesn't foresee China having any major influence in selecting the secretary general to succeed U Thant. "They will have a veto power," he admitted, "but they will use it simply to make sure no one gets the job they don't like."

Swartz's address was the third session of RIT's 13 annual Management Seminar series, which includes 10 half-day sessions opening with noon luncheons that will continue through Feb. 28, 1972 with addresses and discussions by representatives of local industry and authorities in communications and education.

Abortion Topic At Canandaigua

Three members of the Rochester Right to Life and Birthright committees recently addressed the Home-School Association of St. Mary's School in Canandaigua.

About 200 people attended the Nov. 16 meeting to hear Dr. Richard Werner, Bruce Zaepful and Mrs. Kay Zeller explain two anti-abortion groups.

Dr. Werner is a pathologist. His discussion, supplemented by colored slides, covered fetal growth and development as well as methods and results of abortion.

Zaepful is vice president of an advertising firm in Rochester and the director of public relations for the Right to Life Committee. He explained that they are reaching out to the general public and legislators in order to convince as many as possible that human life must be protected at all stages. He urged the repeal of the current New York State abortion law.

Mrs. Zeller, a registered nurse, described Birthright as a non-sectarian group of attorneys, doctors, social workers, nurses, parents and clergy who have opened special confidential service for women who are distressed by unwanted pregnancy.

United Fund workers appreciation dinner was recently held at Mercy Hospital to honor workers for their efforts in bringing the Mercy Hospital goal over the top by $314.50. The goal was $3,000, the final tally was $3,314.50. Shown looking at the chart is William Duffy, representing the United Fund; Mrs. Harry M. Dillon, captain of the winning team; Mrs. Kathleen Mahoney, campaign chairman at the hospital; and Sister Joan Alice, administrator.
