Kearney Parents Keep the School In Business

In the face of the dissolution of many Catholic schools a variety of programs to stay the situation are surfacing. Most are arising now that the crisis is intensifying; but some have been around for awhile.

Five years ago the Fathers Club and the Mothers Club of Bishop Kearney High School realized that a problem existed, and that the only solution was a steady flow of funds.

"We realized our responsibility," said Fred Lappel, a strong supporter of Catholic schools in general and of Bishop Kearney in particular.

"To survive you have to implement programs, you can't do it alone. We made it a joint effort."

The parents' groups instituted four programs for the purpose of continuously adding funds to one general fund to keep the school going strong.

Three years ago they had their first annual Fall carnival, which grows yearly. Last year it brought $40,000, Lappel reported. An equally successful fund raiser has been bingo.

A program that is financially successful plus good for interest and participation at the school is that of the Showtime parents group — an annual musical variety show that plays to a full house all three nights it runs.

Another unique program is the Century Club, an organization of more than 100 business and professional men, 80% of whom are not involved at all in the school. "We get wonderful support throughout the county," Lappel, club president, reported.

The membership fee is $100 a year. The club sponsors one fund-raising function a year, a dinner dance open to the public.

As a result of these four programs, Bishop Kearney High School has the lowest tuition of all the Catholic High schools in the city, Lappel said. "We are very proud of our accomplishment at Bishop Kearney," he added, "and we owe a lot to Brother Edward Tracey, school principal. He is there for every function, a real 24 hour a day man."

Bishop McCafferty Helps Knights Open Jubilee Year

Geneva — A Mass of Reparation for New York State's abortion law officially opened the Diamond Jubilee Year of Geneva Council 272, Knights of Columbus. Auxiliary Bishop John McCafferty was the principal celebrant, and co-celebrants were Father Robert Miller and Father Gennaro Ventura. Assisting at Mass were Grand Knight Robert Peters, Deputy Grand Knight John Hart Jr., Past Grand Knights John Hart Sr., Frank Giardino and Michael Simeone, and Francis D'Amico.

the group for the soul of Joseph McCafferty, father of the Bishop, who served as grand knight of the Geneva Council in 1940 and 1941. Bishop McCafferty gave the principal address, and explored the development of modern society's lack of value for human life.
