

PAT COSTA
As I
See It

I've never been around at the inception of a soap opera before, principally because I did not become addicted until two years ago. And the series I watch are between 10 and 20 years old.

Thus when I read that "Peyton Place" was coming back to television again, this time as a daytime serial, I made an appointment for myself to sit down at 3:30 on a Monday afternoon to watch the first show over Channel 8.

Actually, I didn't get to watch the first show because the phone rang and I didn't have the nerve to tell the caller I had to leave to watch a soaper. That's one of the hazards of working at home, to say nothing of referring to TV watching as an occupation, part time or otherwise.

I did get to see the second show, however, and several of the characters created by the late Grace Metalious brought to new life by a cast of somewhat familiar actors.

For the uninitiated, "Peyton Place" has been around — first as a book, then in movie form and as a twice-a-week night time, continuing story.

After all that, what remains to be offered to daytime viewers? Problems, the principal stock in trade of all soap operas. Personal, domestic, financial, mental, physical, romantic, etc., etc.

The second episode featured Julie Parish as Betty Anderson Harrington, Guy Stockwell as Dr. Rossi and Betty Ackerman as Constance MacKenzie.

From this happy little group we learn that Betty's father is still in a mental institution, her mother is dead and her husband refuses to accept his grandfather's sizable inheritance. Over at the bookstore Constance is still waiting for Allison to show. She's been missing for three years. Doc Rossi is still spouse-less. And that looks like only the beginning of the trouble. With any luck at all, the writers should be able to multiply these woes 100-fold at least.

Have spent so many weeks with "Masterpiece Theater" that I planned on skipping "Last of the Mohicans," seen Sundays at 9 on Channel 21 and repeated Saturday nights. But, we saw the first two shows and were hooked. Try it, you'll like the way the British handle James Fenimore Cooper.

At Home With the Movies

PENDULUM (1968)
Thursday, April 13 (CBS)

George Peppard stars as a private eye who suddenly has a murder rap hanging over his head — and isn't that a novel plot? Jean Seberg and Richard Kiley also star in the story that combines marital infidelity with violence.

The national Catholic film office rated it A-2, morally unobjectionable for adults and adolescents.

TOUR OF THE GUN (1967)
Friday, April 14 (NBC)

One of the very many films made on the legend of Wyatt Earp and that shootout at that old O.K. corral. But this one is slow on the draw.

Mustachioed James Garner is Earp, Jason Robards drinks up a storm as Doc Holliday and the head of the Clanton gang is Robert Ryan, mean as ever.

John Sturges, a top-flight Western director, did this one, and critics were surprised that it was not up to his usual standard.

The Catholic film office rated it A-2, unobjectionable for adults and adolescents.

HARNESS
Saturday, April 15 (NBC)

A made-for-TV movie, this one starring Lorne Greene (of Bonanza) as a rancher saddled with a bore of a wife. Along comes a swinging young free-thinker (Julie Sommers) to shake up things a bit. It's based on a John Steinbeck story of the same title, and like all made-for-TV films, carries no Catholic film rating.

TARZAN AND THE JUNGLE BOY (1968)
Sunday, April 16 (CBS)

Former pro football star Mike Henry is the chest-thumper in this one, about the son of a geologist who wanders off on his own, in the jungles of Africa until Tarzan is called upon to help locate him. Decathlon star Rafer Johnson also appears.
