Plaudits to 'Lock, Stock, Lipstick'

BY PEGGY PEASE

Hornell — Plaudits and accolades to the cast of "Lock, Stock and Lipstick", a three-act comedy presented by the Senior Class of Hornell High School, the evenings of April 7 and 8.

Once again St. Ann's Parish can be proud of its young adults. The majority of the "actors" are graduates of the School.

In a time of waning enrollment in parochial schools and the imminent danger of their closings, it is good to note the leadership qualities exemplified by a large percentage of parochial school graduates.

Bernard Horan, Mary Ellen Argentieri, J. P. Lynch and Melanie Falzoi were cast in lead parts. John Hallenbeck, Rosleen Walsh, Sue Kelly, Joan Livingston and Jane Prunoske were in supporting roles. It was "St. Ann's" night. A combined audience of 1000 viewed the two performances and favored J. P. Lynch with a standing ovation following his portrayal of a not so humble janitor who preferred to be called "sanitation engineer". There was rollicking humor throughout and everyone agreed it was a huge success.

The play was under the direction of Mr. Ronald Quinlan, a member of the English department at the school and also a parishioner of St. Ignatius Parish.

Four more St. Ann's graduates and parishioners were involved with production and publicity, Bill Bishop, Joe Fillmore, Jerome O'Connor and Jack McAnany.

Conservation Council Honors St. John Fisher

St. John Fisher College and its Media Department received an award at the annual Monroe County Conservation Council banquet at the Party House, Beahan Road, April 12.

The award cites the school's outstanding contributions to the ecological movement and its assistance to council activities.

The award particularly recognizes the work done by the professional and student staff of Fisher's Media Department, under the direction of Thomas Proietti, in producing a series of eight 30-minute radio programs titled "Earth People."

The series, which includes interviews, contemporary music, and humorous routines, is designed to inform Rochester of local programs and attitudes about the environment. The "Earth People" series has been broadcast on WBBF, WSAY, WCMF, and is soon to be carried on WAXC, all local radio stations.

Among the topics covered are the 1971 "Walk for Water" the "Save Irondequoit Bay Campaign," and other activities of the Monroe County Conservation Council.

PACE Unit Seeks Help

Hornell — The call is out for more volunteers to help in the PACE program (People's Assistance in Children's Education).

Mrs. Jack Pease, coordinator of this Steuben County Mental Health project requests those interested contact her at 324-3353.

The program involves one hour a week to just "be there" with a child in the City School system. So far, there have been six placements all working successfully and more volunteers are needed.
