

Fr. Bartlett
Leaves McQuaid

By BARBARA MOYNEHAN

Father Albert P. Bartlett's six-year term as rector of McQuaid Jesuit High School is up, so he is leaving Rochester. He has accepted an appointment as assistant professor of English at Canisius College in Buffalo and will begin there in the Fall.

He will miss Rochester, "a very hospitable city, very open to education," but is looking forward to getting back to teaching, he said.

Father John McDonald, superior of the Jesuit community at McQuaid, and a theology teacher there for several years, has been appointed rector. Father Leon Hogenkamp is the principal.

This summer, Father Bartlett will study 19th Century England at the University of London, England, "to freshen up on the King's English."

He feels that the 19th Century is still very much with us in "puritanical Victorian standards of glorification of individualism at the expense of the common good," he said.

"Our big task today," he continued, "is to put together individual freedom and community objectives."

He praised private schools for their flexibility. "This is an advantage," he said. "It is easier to innovate, so there is the opportunity to help education in general."

He has been involved with the Priests' Senate, often speaking in behalf of the Sisters' Council Maintenance Committee; the Rochester-Monroe County Youth Board, The Board of Directors of National Planned Parenthood, the City Club of Rochester, The Secondary School Commission of the Jesuit Educational Association and the Board of Trustees of Le Moyne College in Syracuse.

Sometimes his community interest has brought him criticism, however. His liberal view of the present abortion law is such a case.

"I have been misunderstood on this. I am against abortion. I have preached against it. But I am reluctant to impose by law my belief on non-believers, or people of other philosophical positions."

He doesn't believe there are any more abortions now than before the liberalized law went into effect, "but assuming there are more," he said, "I think it is an interim thing. The experience of the present abortion situation will eventuate in more responsible sexuality and family planning."

Father Bartlett's mother died when he was young and an aunt raised him in Dublin until he was 13. Then he came to the U.S. to join his father, who was dying of cancer. He was educated in New York city's public schools and worked for a dental firm for three years before he entered Fordham University.

He holds a doctorate in English and master's degrees in English and philosophy.
