

The Granger House

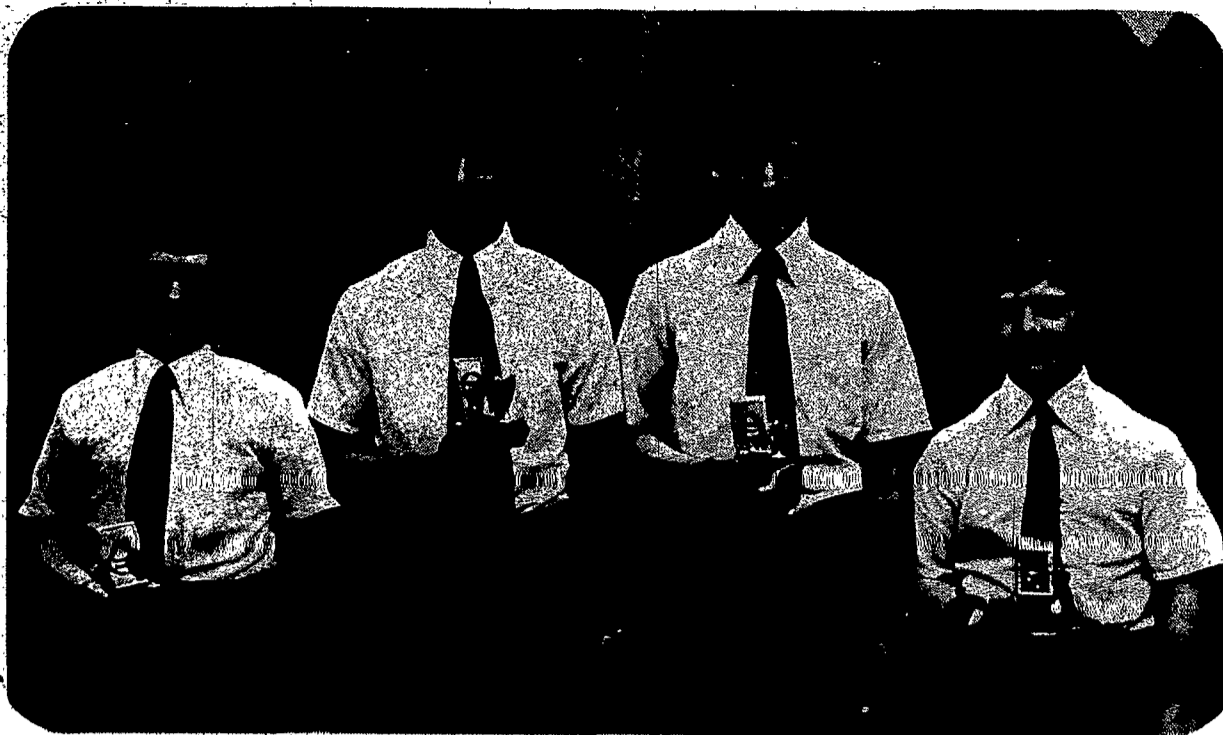

Sisters' Historic Home

By PAT BOLAND

Canandaigua — The Sisters of St. Joseph here probably live in one of the most historic homes of their community. Their convent was built in 1834 by Gen. John A. Granger, to be his home. John Granger was a prominent businessman in Canandaigua; he was active in both civic and church affairs. His father was Gideon Granger, whose gracious home on Main Street has been preserved and restored and is now open to the public. Gideon Granger was postmaster general of the United States under Presi-

In 1873, Father Denis English bought the John Granger property on Main and Gibson streets from the Granger heirs. He moved the Sisters from their old convent on Saltonstall Street to the Granger house.

Here they live today, in a home which was once the scene of many colorful events and housed many interesting guests. American author Washington Irving, for instance, was a guest here for the wedding of his nephew, Saunders Irving to Miss Julia Granger.

Tom Testani Saves Toddler

Hornell — A sixth grade student at the Middle School who flunked a YMCA life-saving course last year, saved the life of a child, Sunday, May 28, at Kanakadea Park. Tom Testani, 12, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Testani of Hornell and parishioners of St. Ann's, said he was fishing from a dock at the park when the child, who was playing with his sister, fell into the water.

"He was going up and down and the water was over his head," said Tom. After jumping into the water, he said, "I grabbed him under the arms and set him on the dock."

Tom said he figured the child would have drowned because "he was under water when I got to him and was screaming."

Tom said when he jumped in, the water was not over his head. "It was up to my neck."

After the child was ashore, Tom said, the parents came running up and wrapped him in a towel and took him away. The sister had gone for help.

Tom never got the name of the child he rescued.

Tom is an outgoing, active, friendly boy who was excellently type-cast in the middle school's recent production of Tom Sawyer. Tom played the lead and gave a very convincing performance. As of May 31, the Testanis are the proud parents of their eighth child, a boy.
