comed the incoming officers and asked for support of their efforts by the women present. "The mothers must take a part in the spiritual education of the children of the parish", Father MacNamara said.

Mrs. Scaglione introduced Father Louis Vasile, assistant pastor of St. Ann's, who opened his remarks by noting the closeness and love personified in his home. The love present to the members of his family. He stressed the mother's role as the leader of the family, the one to "soothe the wounds of the family without complaining."

He mentioned much credit should go to the sisters who work with the children in the school and who also show their motherly love while with the children for so many hours each week.

"We are only one, but together we are a living body," Father Vasile said. "It is only the mother's and father's love that prepares children for the Christian way of life."

Arrangements for the affair were in charge of Loretta Hanrahan and Mary Falzoi. The tables were decorated by candelabra and fresh floral bouquets.
