All In The Family

There was a story recently in the women's pages of the New York Times about a young executive who gave an omelette party for 50 people. Despite the fact that his wife threw up her hands at the prospect, despite the fact that the man didn't know how to cook and despite the fact that the kitchen he used was 10 by 13, the party was a roaring success.

The reasons: He handled the entire thing as a business or-

Fisher Appoints Development VP

Frank G. Krivo, dean of admissions and financial aid at St. Norbert College, in Wisconsin, has been appointed vice president for development at St. John Fisher College.

Father Charles J. Lavery, president, said that in this new post Krivo "will work closely with me to shape policy for admissions and financial aid; the registrar's office and institutional research; as well as communications and special projects."

Krivo began his career as an admissions officer in 1960, with the State University at Albany.

In 1966, he was promoted to director of admissions and in 1970 took his present position as dean of admissions and financial aid at St. Norbert's. He originated the State University Admissions Assistance Center, involving all 60 colleges in the SUNY system, plus units of City University of New York and some private colleges.

Mental Health Commentary

By THE DE PAUL CLINIC

Q — My husband and I disagree about the effect of watching violence on children. I think it makes them more inclined to fight and hurt each other. My husband disagrees. Am I not right?

A — The effect of violence on television is a controversial subject among professionals as well as parents. It is easier to add heat rather than light to the subject. Certainly children are exposed to violence in entertainment as well as news reporting in many media. The amount of this kind of exposure has increased significantly since World War II with the emergence of television as a household fixture and the continuing military activity abroad and civic disobedience at home. Man seems to have an attraction to violence in his fantasy and actual experience. Throughout recorded history, it has permeated the stage and literature. From the arenas in Ancient Rome to the boxing ring of more modern times, he has been an eager observer, not just as a child, but also as an adult. Violence as a political influencer is being widely practiced today and has motivated much research on the subject including the effect of this type of television programming. Some researchers conclude it is bad for children, others felt it was not.

The tube brings violence scenes into our homes for both children and adult. One can ask what effect it has on parents as well as the effect on children. It can stir sympathy for the victim as well as identification with the aggressor. It can activate latent aggressive feelings which may result in aggressive behavior and affect dream content. The effect of it will depend on the personality of the observer. Remember, a reaction to a stimulus depends on the nature of the stimulus, and, on the nature of the person reacting to it.

Watching violence on television or in the movies can be exciting and pleasurable. It can be a way of releasing pent up aggression, not an uncommon phenomenon. Such sublimation has some merit though the traditional playing it out in chase games and sports is a more realistic and total experience — physically and mentally. This outlet has more to recommend it than the physically passive, emotionally intense exposure to violent scenes on a tube.

Television violence is artificial, is experienced in the safety of the home and can be avoided by leaving the room so the observer has some control of his exposure to it. He also may become so used to it that he underreacts to violence when it really occurs. This phenomenon has been used to explain why many people may witness a violent attack without making an attempt to help the victim.

Latin Mass Scheduled At Cenacle

A Latin High Mass will be celebrated July 23 at 4 p.m. at the Cenacle Chapel. The mass is sponsored by the Eastman School Newman Club.

Father Joseph Beatini of St. Francis Xavier Church will be the celebrant. The traditional plainchant will be sung by the Eastman School's Gregorian Chant Choir under the direction of Dr. Erich Schwandt.

The Gregorian Chant Choir, founded three years ago, sings a Latin High Mass about once a month.

School Aid Case Headed To High Court

New York — The three-Judge Federal Court hearing the request for final payment of the 1971-1972 mandated services funds to nonpublic schools said "no" in a split decision.

Previously the judges had issued an order against final payment of the second half funds which were due prior to June 15th. The appeal asked them to reverse their order. They refused by a 2-1 decision.

Attorneys for the schools will now seek a reversal of their stop on the funds from a Supreme Court judge. Since the Court is in recess, it is expected that one judge will hear the appeal.

The appeal will be made by the attorney general, the attorneys for the intervenor schools, and the attorneys for Sen. Brydges who is representing the Senate majority as in intervenor defendant.

The argument to the Supreme Court will be the same one presented to the lower court: based on payment due for services rendered. The payments have been expected (and budgeted by the schools) for 1971-1972, now over. Services were performed as contracted for by the State.

Once the appeal is filed a decision could come at any time.
