Candidate Survey

In the 34th District, Wayne and part of Monroe, Rep. Frank Horton, Republican, said he would not support federal liberalized abortion.

"I do not believe that any policy initiatives taken by the federal government in dealing with population growth should include support or encouragement for liberalized abortion. This question is best left to the judgment of the states."

Democrat Jack Rubens, while declining to make a yes or no answer, also talked of states' responsibility in abortion.

"I would prefer that this question remain a state matter as this is my general philosophy — that the federal government should intervene in state matters only as a last resort.

"However, I am concerned that New York has become an abortion haven for residents of those states that do not allow liberalized abortion. This results and has resulted in a situation where the well-to-do in other states can have an abortion and the poor cannot because they cannot afford the travel to this state. Therefore, if the situation continues as it is, I will be in favor of federal standards, in whatever form they might take, to eliminate this inequity."

The Conservative candidate in the 34th, Richard E. Lusink, said he doesn't favor U.S. government support of liberalized abortion but commented, "However, I do not favor legislation that prohibits individuals' right to an abortion if they so choose."

Liberal Rafael Martinez did not reply.

In the 35th District, which includes Livingston and part of Monroe, Rep. Barber Conable commented:

"I do not believe that the federal government should assume jurisdiction for regulating abortion practices. This is a highly personal matter, presently regulated by state governments, and the federal government should not pre-empt this area."

His opponent, Democrat Terence J. Spencer, did not indicate yes or no but commented:

"Probably as a result of my Catholic rearing, I have a personal abhorrence of abortion. Certainly as a result of the discipline in civics and American history that I received in parochial schools, however, I cannot condone legislation based merely on personal feeling."

Schools

Corning South would not be able to continue. The assistance is "absolutely and unquestionably" needed for the schools to survive, he said.

Officials feel that because of the "one-shot" nature of the assistance no constitutional question is involved. The ongoing aid characteristic was pointed out as a major stumbling block of other aid laws that have been struck down.

They also feel that the limited nature of the aid also negates excessive entanglement arguments that have been cited in court cases.

Fisher Adds Lecturer

St. John Fisher College has appointed Father Albert J. Shamon, an adjunct special lecturer in teacher education for the 1972-73 academic year. The appointment increases the college's faculty to 94 members.

Besides his teaching responsibilities at Fisher, Father Shamon is the diocesan vicar for Education and writes a weekly column for the Courier-Journal

Wednesday, November 1, 1972

"... I don't think this issue can ever be settled by legislation, and what underlies it is probably a question of civil rights anyway. In our pluralistic society, legislation treating abortion differently from other surgical procedures is probably unconstitutional, a violation of the personal liberty of the pregnant woman, and I would like to see this problem settled, therefore in the courts by a review of such laws as there are, rather than in the state or national legislatures by the production of new laws that are doomed to be unacceptable to a large number of the people."

Terence Brennan, the Conservative candidate in the 35th, answered no, he does not think the U.S. government should support liberalized abortion.

"On moral grounds, I would oppose any liberalization of the abortion laws in the District of Columbia, where the Congress has complete lawmaking authority. On both moral and constitutional grounds, I would oppose any attempt by the federal government to impose more permissive standards on state governments."

The Liberal candidate, Alicia Burgos, did not answer.

In the 36th District, Orleans, part of Monroe, Republican-Conservative Henry P. Smith III, simply answered no.

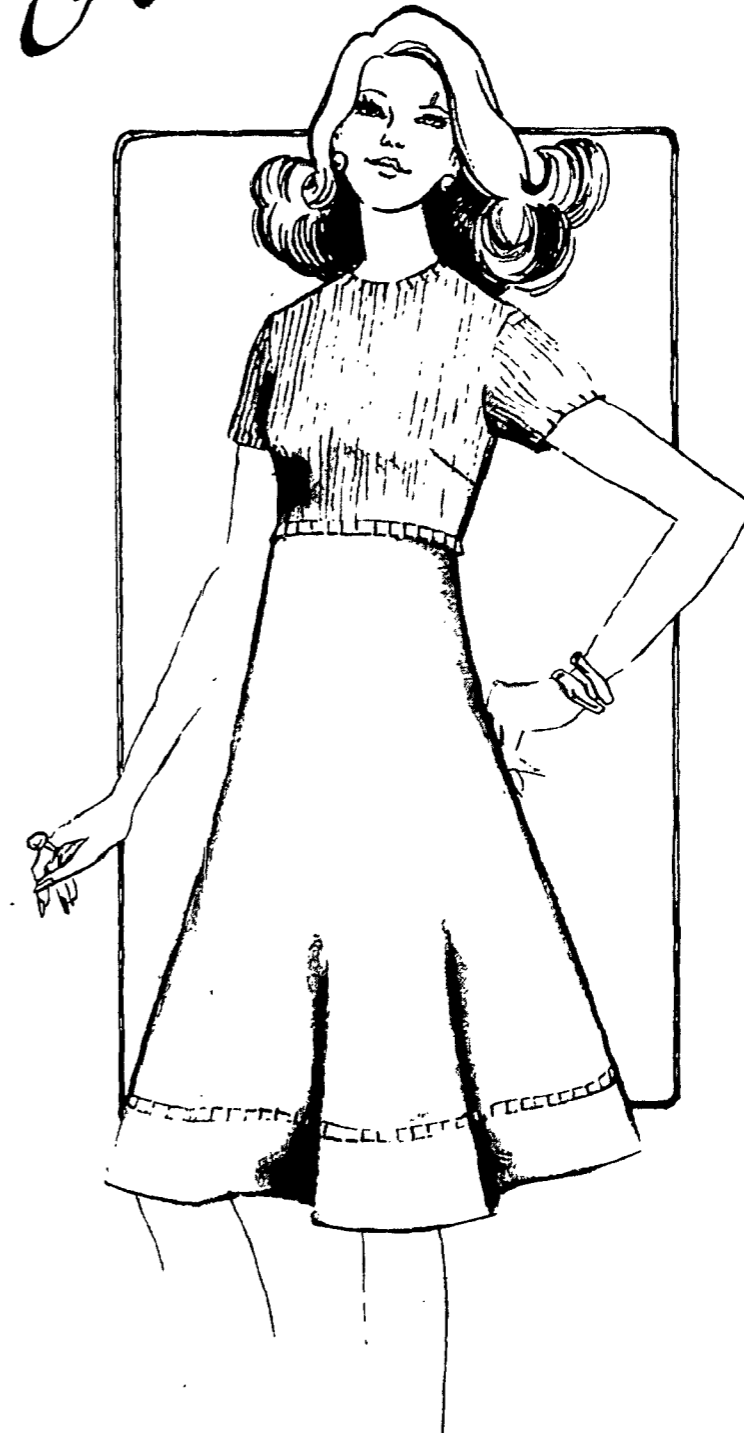

His opponent Richard D. (Max) McCarthy, Democrat-Liberal, also said no, he doesn't think the federal government should support liberalized abortion.

In the 39th District, James F. Hastings, Republican, replied no.

"I don't believe the federal government should involve itself in this issue at all, as to the basic question you ask. In the only federal reference to this subject which I am aware of, the Family Planning Act of which I was sponsor, federal funds specifically may not be used for abortion."

His opponent, Wilbur White Jr., Democrat, did not reply.
