

however, three general groups have been established. Each group contains people who responded with similar answers to many of the questions in the survey. A descriptive profile can be drawn that presents the major responses shared by Catholics in each group.

that he can almost always apply the principles of Catholic faith in his daily life. He seeks direct guidelines from the church but not in reference to moral and social concerns. And, he shows no greater tendency to act in accordance with Church directives on moral and social issues than all other Catholics.

Changing role for the layman

Time of Renewal

In addition, the complete survey, answers, and findings will be published in a booklet, "Dialogue for Renewal", available to the public this Fall.

The Catholic Church—rooted in the solid earth of tradition and in the airy sky of openness and change.

AP/WIDE