

Movie Camera Brings Outdoors Back Home Alive in Full Color

On last year's camping vacation, the rascals paid a friendly visit to taste Mrs. Johnson's campfire dessert — Dutch Oven apple cobbler; as usual son John fell in the lake with all his clothes on; the tent collapsed in the middle of the night; and her husband caught a trout that grows larger with each telling.

The Johnsons were one of many families that decided to make the yearly vacation an adventure in the Great Outdoors. To be sure the trip was truly unforgettable, they took along a movie camera.

Family Project
Once they started using the camera, the Johnsons realized that home movie-making could be a family project. They found it possible to zoom in for close-up and wide-angle shots at the touch of a button with the Kodak XL-55 movie camera. The quality of new improved Kodachrome II movie films made their movies truly colorful, and the XL camera let them make available light movies — without cumbersome lighting equipment.

Of course, movie-making requires care in shooting. An interesting movie should tell a story with a beginning, middle and ending. On the Johnsons' canoe outing, for example, they started filming as Mr. Johnson stowed away the picnic lunch in the canoe. By following through with the story sequence in the family movie, and limiting each segment from five to thirteen seconds, the complete story of the canoe trip was captured on film.

Movies at Sunset
Since the new Kodak cameras allow movie-making even under low lighting conditions, the Johnsons were able to film walks along the lake at sunset, followed by the evening marshmallow roast over the campfire. When the rascals decided to make an evening visit to the camp, capturing them on film in vivid color was easy, using the available light XL cameras and high speed Kodak Ektachrome 160 film.

The Kodak XL33 movie camera with high speed film takes natural color movies from dawn to dusk by just the light that's there.

Holding the camera steady, Mr. Johnson turned at the waist when panning the lake shore at sunset, and kept motion at a minimum while capturing the peaceful scene. To assure results as successful as the Johnsons', experiment with your camera before vacation time.

From Man in the Family, A Specialty of the House

Many men love to cook, especially outdoors. One very popular he-man specialty is Beef Shish-Kabob, a flavorful, delicious meal that's perfect at a family gathering, a large party or a romantic dinner for two.

BEEF SHISH-KABOB

- 2 lbs. lean beef round
- 3 green peppers
- 12 large mushrooms
- 1/2 c. salad oil
- 1/4 c. vinegar
- 1/4 c. chopped onion
- 1 t. salt
- 1 t. coarsely ground or cracked pepper
- 2 t. Worcestershire or steak sauce

1/2 c. red wine
1 1/2 T. dry mustard
Cut beef into 1 1/2-inch cubes. Blend salad oil, vinegar, onion, salt, pepper, Worcestershire sauce, wine and mustard. Pour over beef cubes in deep bowl and refrigerate overnight or let stand at room temperature 2 or 3 hours, turning meat occasionally. When ready to cook, thread beef and wedges of green pepper alternately on skewer, including 2 mushrooms per skewer. Grill over flame at high setting, turning often for 12-15 minutes. Makes 6-8 servings.
