

To Study in Europe

Miss Terry Stenclik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Stenclik of VanOlinda Street, will spend this semester not at Nazareth College which she usually attends, but at the Institute of European Studies in Vienna, Austria. She is a speech major at Nazareth.

GeVa to Launch New Show Time

GeVa Evenings, a new concept in theater time will have its grand opening Tuesday, Jan. 22, at 5:45 p.m. when GeVa presents Joe Egg, a play by British playwright Peter Nichols.

"We believe this new starting time will appeal both to business people and suburban families," said GeVa's Artistic Director, Donald MacKechnie. "Business people downtown can avoid the homebound rush-hour traffic. Wives can meet their husbands downtown after work and can even bring their children to the play without feeling that they'll be keeping them out too late."

GeVa (the Genesee Valley Arts Foundation) is a not-for-profit organization founded in 1972. Its programs include experimental, playwrights' and children's theater.

Theater-in-education programs are beginning now in some Rochester and Monroe County schools.

GeVa Evenings will begin at 5 p.m., Tuesday through Friday in the theater center at 168 Clinton Ave. South. Business people and shoppers can meet their friends and unwind and relax in the theater with a drink and a snack until showtime.

Joe Egg, deals with a totally handicapped child in a wheelchair and depicts the ways her family and their friends deal with the problems she presents. Roger Forbes and Patricia Doyle play the parents.
