State Priests Councils Hear Report on Rochester Council

Syracuse — When representatives of the Priests' Councils of New York (PCNY) held their quarterly meeting at the Hilton Inn here Jan. 29, Father John Mulligan of the Pastoral Council Formation Committee, Diocese of Rochester, presented a paper on the development of Diocesan Pastoral Council of Rochester.

The development of a diocesan council in Rochester has taken four years. It is a slow reflective process, a process toward the more constitutional form of diocesan government that is called for by the Vatican Council.

The PCNY recommended to Bishop Thomas Grady of Chicago, chairman of the Committee on Priestly Life and Ministry, to appoint Monsignor Colin MacDonald, executive director of the new office.

They urged the Committee of Bishops to receive the priests who resign from the ministry with bignity and respect and called for the process of laicization conducted by a Committee of Bishops based in the United States.

Father Peter Young, president of PCNY and priest-observer to the Washington meeting of bishops, asked the Priests' Councils of New York to become involved in the problems of Prison Reform.

Each of the eight councils were asked to react to the suggested method of selection of bishops by the Canon Law Society and make this known to Bishop Flanagan of Worcester, Chairman of the Bishops' Committee on Canonical Affairs.

At the request of several Priest Senates, a statewide committee of Priests for Justice and Peace was formed to establish closer ties with the State Catholic Committee — to raise the consciousness of the Legislature to the evils of poor housing, unemployment and inadequate education of the poor, as well as that of abortion and pornography.

Cardinal Hits 'Profiteering'

Yonkers, N.Y. [RNS] — While deploring "profiteering" during the current energy crisis, Cardinal Terence Cooke of New York directed priests of the Catholic archdiocese to be ready to aid "the first victims" of any crisis, the underprivileged, the poor, the aging, the children and the unemployed.

Cardinal Cooke said he had already instructed Catholic Charities, archdiocesan educational agencies and other services "to develop emergency assistance programs."

He added that a special telephone number has been set up to request needed warm clothing and other commodities or services.

Addressing a meeting of priests at St. Joseph's Seminary, Yonkers, Cardinal Cooke said that while he was not seeking to name any "villains" in the energy crisis he did "deplore any circumstance where a person or a corporation reaps an exorbitant profit from the sufferings of the poor and secures an unfair economic advantage from the discomfort of any persons or families or groups in our society."

'Profiteering'

Noting that the priests' primary concern is not condemnation but to insure, "as best we can, that this situation is not a grave hardship on people," the prelate said "our prudent and far sighted concern for the poor during the energy crisis" is a way "we and our people can reach out together and help our neighbors."

The cardinal said he was aware that all priests were ready to "open the facilities" of their parishes in the event of an emergency. He further asked them to "encourage your parishioners to be responsive to the needs of their neighbors" and show concern for one another.

Boys Town Funds Research Center

Boys Town, Neb. [RNS] — An $11.2 million Boys Town Center for the Study of Youth Development is being established at the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

Under the agreement signed by university president Clarence C. Walton and Archbishop Daniel E. Sheehan, president of the Father Flanagan Boys' Home here, the commitment by Boys Town will cover 25 years; with $450,000 available each year until 1998.

Catholic University was chosen as the Eastern Regional Research Center for Boys Town after more than a year of consideration of campuses. Stanford University, Palo Alto, Calif., has been serving as the Western Regional Research Center.

The center will research such problems as rejection of parents, drug addiction, anti-social behavior, and inability to learn. "If these problems could be recognized and solved in their early stages," Archbishop Sheehan said, "it would eliminate many of the corrective measures now necessary to rehabilitate such boys and girls."

Major research projects to be launched immediately are a national study of the American adolescent based on a survey of a thousand boys between 12 and 16 years of age. The second will be a study of religious development during childhood and adolescence.
