

Coping with the Energy Crunch Afloat

The fuel crunch has caused a lot of boaters to ponder the effects on their sport.

Among those putting thinking time on the subject were the people at Johnson Outboards who make and sell more outboard motors each year than any other firm.

Here is a list of fuel-saving tips they have developed:

- Measure and mix your fuel/oil mixture accurately.
- Fuel up carefully, avoiding spillage.
- Properly match your engine, propeller and boat.
- Operate at less than wide open throttle.
- Many outboards today are thermostatically controlled to provide for instant warm-up. Do not idle engine for long periods. Start it — then drive.
- Keep outboards in top operating condition. Check plugs and timing.
- Have a thorough engine tune-up before using your boat this season.

Underneath each handsome exterior is a rigid 16-gage steel cage-like frame. Vertical steel studs are welded at each stress point to horizontal steel members forming all four sidewalls and roof.

Then this rugged steel cage-like structure is welded to a reinforced steel underframe. You and your family are surrounded with steel.

In addition to the Concord rugged steel-cage construction, urethane foam insulation is applied with a new unitizing technique that we call body bond.

Expanding urethane foam is applied directly to the aluminum skin from the interior, bonding the aluminum, steel studs and insulation into a cohesive unit.
