BIG MONEY FILM

New York [RNS] — The Exorcist, the controversial movie about demon possession, holds fifth place among the "All-Time Boxoffice Champion Films," according to the 1974 annual tabulation by Variety, the showbusiness newspaper.

The Exorcist was released in late 1973. By the end of 1974, it had produced $66,300,000 in rentals, Variety said. It was not, however, the biggest earning film of 1974. That distinction went to "The Sting," which won the Academy award as best picture of 1974 and paid distributors $68,450,000.

Chessman Take Guard Honors

Bishop Kearney's "King's Guard" hosted the 1975 Banner Bout on Jan. 11 in which seven area color guard drill teams participated: Chessmen, Rochester; Tri-Town Gold, Castile; Blue Devils, Brockport; Henrietta Highlites, Henrietta; Midnighters, Rochester; Royal Coachmen, North Tonawanda, and Hilton Crimson, Hilton.

The Chessmen of Rochester marched away with all honors. They took first place in guard competition with a score of 79.45 — took Best Captain, Best Rifle, and Best Banner Line awards.

Second-place honors went to the Tri-Town Gold from Castile. The "King's Guard" gave an exhibition performance.
