Activity the Byword . . . Both in and Out of School

By JOAN M. SMITH

Though it sits nestled among hills, and is separated from its. fellow Catholic high schools by many miles Notre Dame High in Elmira makes its presence known through its uniqueness.

Notre Dame was the first coeducational Catholic high school in the Rochester Diocese. Also, it is the only Catholic high school in the diocese with a lay person as principal - Warren Tessier.

Another ingredient which makes Notre Dame so unusual is as Tessier proudly stated, "The activity, which is almost unbelievable we're active in the school, and community the spirit is high."

Spirit and enthusiasm are the sports awareness program. incorporated with physical education. Rather than confining gym classes to regimented calisthenics, bowling, soccer, basketball, wrestling and football have been made a part of the gym. curriculum on a rotating schedule. In fact, bowling alleys are conveniently located in back of the school where student teams vigorously display their bowling expertise

One of Notre Dame's philosophies ... education cannot only be found in words and books but also in action and experience . . led to the

MINDING THEIR OWN BUSINESSES

One thousand Monroe County High School students are operating their own businesses this week on the Midtown Mall. The students, from 35 schools, participate in 48 Junior Achievement companies, and are presenting the fifth annual J.A. Trade Fair through Saturday, Feb.

seniors in the Fall of 1974. The "Project Involvement" program was designed for people helping themselves and others, and its theory points out that all learning does not take place within the walls of a school, but can be obtained outside the school.

Students participating in this project volunteer to work in the community as hospital, legal, and industrial secretaries as well as offer their services to accounting departments, and train as volunteer firem gives the students an in-depth experience in various careers, but it gives the Elmira community the benefit of young adult energy and dedication.

Principal Tessier does not find young people apathetic. He sees them as always ready to be actively involved. In explaining Notre Dame's function Tessier said, "Our school system is based on values. Our goal is to develop the student as a whole person both religiously as well as educationally.
