What do you think about women serving in the church as lectors, altar girls, and ordained priests.

NOTRE DAME HIGH SCHOOL

Steve McNamara, senior "I think women should serve in the Church as altar girls, and assist at ceremonies, but they should not perform the actual ceremonies. There were no women Apostles, and I feel the tradition should be kept. Some changes could be made to give women a more active role, but I am against ordination of women as priests."

Bill Huffner, senior, Student Council president "Yes, I think they should have their places in the Church perhaps not necessarily as priests, but they should have a more active roll such as lectors, altar girls, lay persons taking communion to the sick. I don't oppose ordination of women, but I don't see it in the near future."

Cora Manzari, freshman, pep club "I think women should be as equal as men, and if they love God as much as man does they should have the right to be priests with all their privileges celebrating Mass administering the sacraments."

Patti Biroscak, junior "I think it is all right for women to get involved in the church like serving Mass, giving sermons and readings, but I wouldn't like to see them ordained as priests because priests are the closest people to God, and God was a man. I would feel uncomfortable if a woman were a priest."

Barry Heller, junior "I think it's too much of a break from tradition to allow women in places that have always been occupied by men in the Church. Women should participate in the ways that have always existed for them."

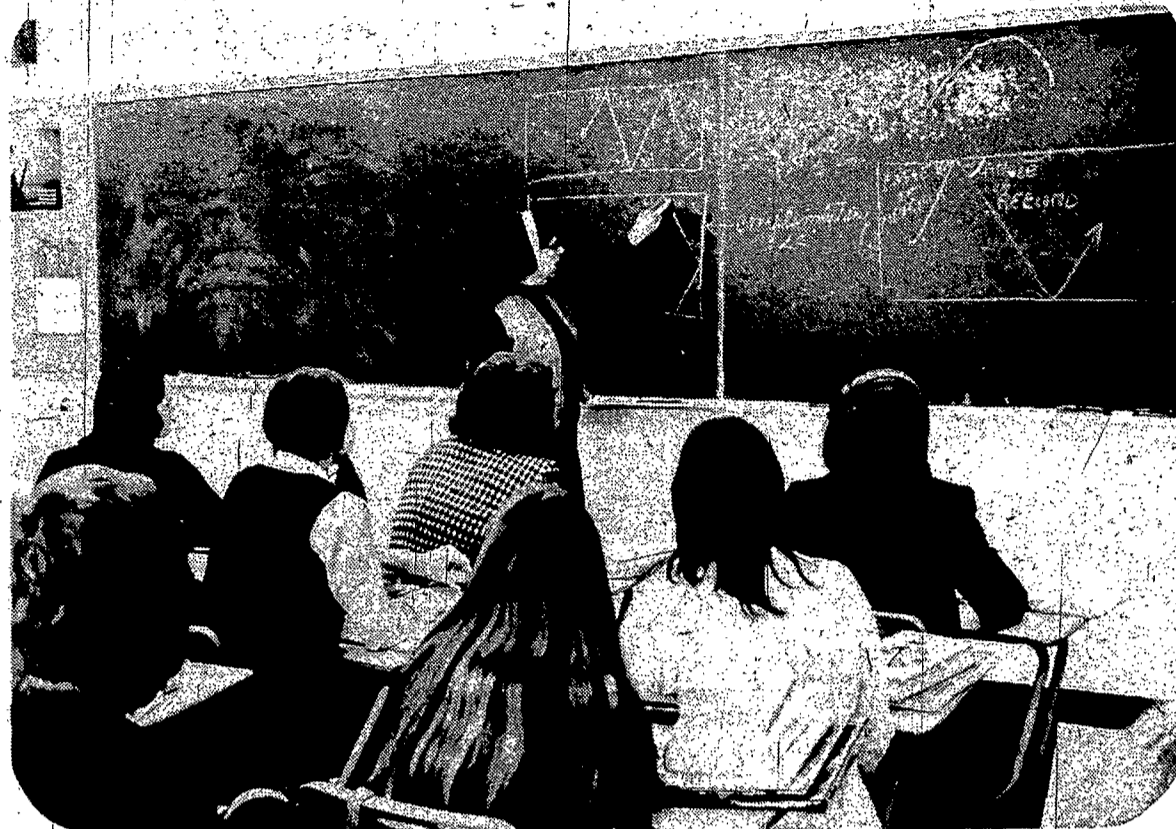

Michelle Ryan, junior, cheerleader "I think they should be involved, but not as priests because Christ himself was a man so the Church should follow in His steps but (the Church) should not count women out entirely from an active roll."

Darlene Swartwood, freshman, pep club "Yes, if she wants to there is no reason a woman can't do the same job as a man — even in religion. A woman can get a point across just like a man."

Patrick Dispenza, sophomore, hockey "If they want to let them, but I don't think they should because it is too much of a tradition in the Church to have man the center of Mass. The Catholic religion represent Christ, and Christ was a man."

Sister Maurice and some new angles on geometry.

Making That Cushion Shot ... It's All Geometry!

By JOAN M. SMITH

"P rhymes with T and that spells trouble..." so goes the song from the hit musical, The Music Man. The lyrics describe the "terrible" trouble which could develop from playing the skillful game of pool.

Sister Maurice Pearson, Cardinal Mooney's geometry instructor, however, ignores this particular ditty because pool poses no problems for her. In fact, she uses the game to solve problems in coordinate geometry!

angles, and different degrees which clearly show the students such geometrical wonders as — when you hit a pool ball against a cushion the "angle of rebound" is the same as the "angle of approach."

Messrs. Galileo, and Newton might wonder at Sister's unique classroom jargon "rebound" ... "off the cushion and into the pocket," but she makes her point, and in so doing has made geometry a fascinating game of mathematical surprises for her students.

So, if your son or daughter declares they have a geometry test, and then head for the pool table — don't worry — they are studying!

A Winner!

Virginia Errico, a senior at Our Lady of Mercy High School, was the recipient of last week's Winner's Circle $5.

Weekly there will appear in the Courier-Journal a crowd photo taken somewhere within the diocese with one person circled. That person will receive $5 if he or she brings the clipping of the photo into the Courier before Tuesday noon following publication date.

Time for Research

Notre Dame students Kathy Hulbert and John Liddy, working on assignments, look at the current magazines available in the school library for research purposes. The school operates on modular scheduling which gives students their option of visiting an open room, resource center, library, or Student Commons for study.
