Keeping Sex in Perspective Role of Doctor-Lecturer

By JOAN M. SMITH

What would you do if you had to give a sex education course to a freshman class of 300 boys and girls? Perhaps you would be as nervously tongue-tied as I would be, and resort to the birds-bees and stork fantasies.

Dr. Arthur Florack, gynecologist, who conducts a human sexuality course for Cardinal Mooney freshmen is one person, however, who tackles sex education with aplomb. His realistic attitude and genuine enthusiasm in helping young men and women are the ingredients which make his lectures a success. His relaxed and confident manner immediately creates a rapport between himself and his young audiences.

This is not a new venture for the doctor as he began his sex education courses about eight years ago, and now he and Mrs. Florack travel throughout the state giving lectures and showing film strips on anatomy, and abortion.

His seminars not only deal with the above matters but also with conception, pregnancy, venereal disease, contraception, the psychological and moral aspects of sex as well as femaleness and maleness.

"The kids are super," remarked Dr. Florack, and smiled as he spoke about some of their questions which are "unbelievable." Asked if these questions ever made him want to run and hide he laughingly said, "Rarely."

Parents are invited to the type movie was necessary. Mrs. Murray found the seminar to be educational and stated, "Dr. Florack did a fine job in presenting the physiological aspects of sex."

What was the young adult reaction? "I thought it was good," said Dave Lilly, "the doctor was frank and he knew what he was talking about." In regards to the abortion film Dave commented, "It's scary. If you think of it (the baby) as yourself you wouldn't be here."

Missy Gretelle declared, "He explained everything real well. They (Doctor and Mrs. Florack) show the movie to prove to the people who believe in abortion what really happens to the baby."

"He was very detailed, and knew what he was talking about," said Rob Fagan and added, "the doctor said he didn't show us the movie to 'gross' us out, but to show us that the baby is really going to die."

Dr. Florack explained his lecturing as "basically giving the kids information which makes up for the misinformation or no information at all." In his opening remarks he noted, "back in the dark ages when we (adults) were growing up, sex wasn't talked about... well the doctor not only talks about sex but he defines and clarifies all aspects surrounding this important part of being human."

His candidness in dealing with the subject is welcomed by the young adults as Anne Seccombe pointed out, "He didn't use technical words, but words we could understand."

lectures, and according to the doctor those that do come are approving though he admits there are some objections to various parts of his program — the discussions on venereal disease, adoption, and showing of the abortion film.

Two Mooney parents discussed their opinions with this reporter and both were impressed with Dr. Florack's handling of all subject matter. Mrs. Mary Ann Keefer agreed with the doctor that showing the abortion film would impress upon the students what abortion really is.

Though Mrs. Ann Murray said the movie generally shocked some of the youngsters she maintained, "I feel by the time they are in the ninth grade they should be able to absorb this kind of shock." She noted there were mothers who did not feel this

Scholarship Winner Chooses Law

"I was excited," beamed St. Agnes senior Karen Anderson as she told about receiving the National Achievement Scholarship for outstanding black students which was sponsored by the Monsanto Co.

As winner of this $1,000 award, Karen was chosen in open competition with all finalists in this geographic region. The winners were picked by a selection committee on the basis of students' academic and extracurricular records, test scores, and the recommendations of their high school principals.

Karen, also a State Regents Scholarship winner, plans to attend Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania and major in political science. She then intends to continue her education at Harvard Law School, and then into the courts as a criminal lawyer.

"It was somewhere in grammar school," where Karen claims she first decided on law, and so far hasn't been deterred from her goal. "Things should be just, and they're not so I think I should do something about it," is how she explained her choice of a law career, and with a twinkle in her eye she added, "besides I like to talk."

Karen is vice president of the Student Senate, and her hobbies range from reading to listening to classical music as well as jazz. She acknowledges her four years at St. Agnes has been the educational basis needed to pursue her goal — and pursue it she will — as she confidently declared, "I know where I'm going."

Mooney Coach Honored

Miss Marcia Niebch, physical education teacher at Cardinal Mooney High School has been voted City Catholic League Field Hockey Coach of the Year. Miss Niebch was chosen by vote of her fellow City Catholic league coaches. This is the second time the trophy has been awarded.

A native of Batavia, Miss Niebch graduated with a degree in physical education from Brockport State. She has pursued graduate study at Brockport with an emphasis in psychology. Miss Niebch has coached field hockey for three years; this year's team compiled a 6-2 league record. She has been coaching basketball at Mooney for six seasons; her squad is currently 7-2 in league competition. She is also mentor of the volleyball and softball teams. She has had the opportunity to see girls' sports grow both in the city and at Cardinal Mooney.

Asked what she enjoyed best about coaching she replied, "The best part is watching the progressive achievement of the kids, they really grow in many ways."
