

Round Rap Around Rap Around Rap Around Rap Around

By VIC CAROSCIO
Notre Dame

Our world is in a sad state. There are people all over starving while many of us are content to have too much and, often times, be wasteful. We do not have to look far to find the poor and starving of the world. They can be found in our own country, in our own communities.

Many of us call ourselves Catholic. Anyone who calls himself a Catholic knows that the main thrust of the message God gives to us and the supreme message of the God-man Jesus Christ is to love. He told us that we must love God with all our hearts, souls and minds and that we should love our neighbor as ourselves. Jesus tells us that these are the two greatest commandments.

Human Development are two words being heard a lot, lately? Some of the students and faculty at Notre Dame have become actively involved in the campaign for Human Development. They have also taken up the task of educating the rest of the Notre Dame community to the plight of the poor and under-privileged who are unable to help themselves. This is not enough, however. We must become actively involved in the movement to help these people. It does no good to merely think about them. We can fast, we can pray, we can form Human Development committees or become active in them. It is important to commit ourselves to doing something.

It is our duty as a Christian. If we truly believe in God's call to love and help others, then Human Development makes sense. Practice your faith and instill some hope, contribute a little charity and the result will be love.

Choral Belles

Nazareth Choral Belles doing song number from "Goodbye Mr. Chips" at concert.

Baseball at MCC

Next Stop for Many Grads

By JOHN DOSER

Dave Chamberlain was in his fourth year of coaching baseball at Gates-Chili High School when he learned of an opening at the then new Cardinal Mooney High School in Greece.

He thought he'd have Monroe Community College athletic director George Monagan, with whom he'd worked a few summers in Kodak Park Softball Leagues, put in a good word for him.

Instead, Monagan offered Chamberlain a job at MCC and now he's about to enter his 12th season at the helm of the immensely successful MCC baseball Tribunes.

"We strive for Ten in 75" means a lot around the MCC campus — it's translated into the Rochester community college's baseball team's desire to reach the National Junior College Athletic Association regional playoffs for the 10th year in a row.

A lot of Rochester area youngsters have helped Chamberlain reach that goal nine times already, and many have come out of Rochester area Catholic high schools.

Chamberlain sounds like a Marine sergeant as he reads off the names: Delgatti, Ryan, Mitchell, Lelik, Telex, Fitzpatrick, Simms, Sammartino, Weston, Grasso, Farrell, Nally, etc., etc.

These players from Cardinal Mooney, Aquinas, McQuaid and Bishop Kearney have helped Chamberlain's MCC teams win 161 and lose 71 (.693 percentage) in the past 11 seasons.

Of course there have been hundreds of other area baseball stars from other schools who've played for Chamberlain and gone on to the pros, but this story concerns some of the Catholic school grads who've made it to the play-for-pay circuits — or could have.

Chamberlain's prize pupil no doubt is ex-Mooney pitcher Scott Delgatti who went from MCC to the New York Yankee chain and last summer thrilled the home crowd in a Syracuse Chiefs' uniform while handcuffing the Rochester Red Wings for three innings in a relief stint.

After MCC, Delgatti signed with the Yanks and spent last season at Oneonta in the New York-Penn (NYP) League where he won nine, lost one, and helped the Yankee farm team win the league pennant.

At MCC in his second year he won all seven starts, was fifth in the nation among junior college hurlers with an earned run average of 0.66, and made the All-Region first team.

He also fanned 83 and walked 34 in 54 1/3 innings, allowed 10 runs (only four earned) and fired four shutouts, the latter for an MCC school record.

In 1973, his first year under Chamberlain, Delgatti won four of five, and whiffed 49 in 32 1/3 innings.

"Scott is a boy with an excellent attitude," Chamberlain says.

"I never had a kid who wanted to play pro ball more than he did. He has a big league curve ball, he developed a good slider in his second year here, and he has a good fast ball.

"He's a good student, a great performer, and a super boy," Chamberlain says.

Delgatti, 20, has a great future in pro baseball, according to Chamberlain, and he has enough ammunition in his assortment of pitching tricks to make it to the big leagues, Chamberlain believes.

Mike Ryan of McQuaid played for Chamberlain in 1972-73 and is now in his last year at Cornell University.

"Mike wasn't drafted by any big league team, but several are following him," Chamberlain says. "He could be drafted in June," Chamberlain adds.

He played centerfield under Chamberlain in his first year at MCC and won the Adirondack Bat-makers' Big Stick Award for his .436 batting average, the highest in the Northeastern U.S. among junior colleges that season, according to Chamberlain.

In his second year at MCC he caught and played center field, and at Cornell he's playing third base. At McQuaid he played everywhere, Chamberlain explains, typical of a youngster who won the Dave Johnson Award at MCC, symbolic of leadership and dedication.

Jim Mitchell, another ex-Mooney ballplayer, only played one fall season at shortstop for MCC, before signing with the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"He hit .413 for us and he has one great set of hands, a natural instinct to be at the ball when it arrives and he covers a pretty good range for a young kid," Chamberlain says.

Dennis Fitzpatrick, a Bishop Kearney grad, played for MCC in 1970, and won nine of ten games on the mound as a 6-5, 190-pound lefthander.

"He could have gone into pro ball," Chamberlain says, "but he went into the service instead. When he came out he was still 6-5, but he weighed 240. He's now on a football scholarship at the University of Minnesota," Chamberlain explains.

Oh well, everybody knows you can't win 'em all. But MCC comes awfully close.

Wallace W. Goodsell, contest moderator, Kevin Hassen, Sister Evelyn Marie, Kearney oratorical coach, and chairman Thomas Grosodonia, at the K. of C. annual district oratorical meet at Bishop Kearney High.

Speaking Well for Kearney

Kevin Hassen, a Bishop Kearney senior, has captured first place honors in two recent oratorical contests — the annual district Knights of Columbus contest at Kearney and the district finals of the National Forensics League in Peekskill.

The topic for the K. of C. contest was "Our Constitution — Is It Relevant Today?" Hassen's award was a $100 U.S. bond. Jeffery Bloom of Charlotte High was second, winning a $50 bond, and Jane Pellitteri of Webster-

Schroeder High third, for a $25 bond. The state finals will be May 10 in Kiamesha Lake.

As a result of his victory in the original oratory category in the Peekskill contest, Hassen will compete in the national finals in Indianapolis, June 16-18.

Also speaking at Peekskill were Don DiGennaro of Aquinas (extemporaneous) and Elaine Aers, of Kearney (dramatic interpretation).

Mercy Girl Wins Literary Award

Sheila Garred of Mercy High won the prose award as the Friends of the Rochester Library announced its Junior Literary Awards for best original works by high school students in Monroe County.

The poetry award was won by Gregory Galligan of Greece.

Arcadia High School for the second year in a row.

Miss Garred won the prose award for a short story entitled "A Right Jolly Old Elf." Awards were presented at the Friends annual literary awards luncheon on March 24.

PENFIELD—WALWORTH—LIONS CLUB Presents
IT'S A KNOCKOUT OF A SHOW
A Night of Boxing Nostalgia
7 LIVE EXHIBITIONS
 plus Jr. Olympic Bouts
 The all-time great names of Boxing will be here in PERSON!

WAR MEMORIAL THURSDAY APRIL 3, 8:00 P.M.

| | | |
|---|------------|--|
| Rocky GRAZIANO Former World Middleweight Champ | VS. | Charles Schiano City Councilman & Former Aquinas Champ |
| Floyd PATTERSON Former World Heavyweight Champ | VS. | Richard Rosenbaum N.Y.S. Republican Chairman & Former Hobart College Champ |
| Joey GIARDELLO Former World Middleweight Champ | VS. | Frank Lamb The Fighting Councilman |
| Sandy SADDLER Former World Feather-Weight Champ | VS. | Ossie Sussman Former Welterweight Contender |
| Carmen BASILIO Former Welterweight & Middleweight Champ | VS. | BILLY Fackelman Former Aquinas & Colgate Heavyweight Champ |
| Chico VEJAR Former Top Welterweight Contender | VS. | Frank Guelli Former Aquinas, Intercollegiate & Marine Corp. Champ |
| Willie PEP Former World Featherweight Champ | VS. | Leading Rochester Sports Celebrity |

GUEST REFEREE JERSEY JOE WOLCOTT

All Proceeds go to Penfield-Walworth Lions Clubs

| | | | | | |
|----------------|------------------|-------------|-----------------|---------------|----------------|
| TICKETS | GEN. ADM. | RES. | RINGSIDE | GOLDEN | $25.00 |
| | $3.00 | $4.00 | $5.00 | RINGSIDE | |

On Sale at Red Lion Rest. 262-5180/NIGHT OF SHOW—War Memorial ADM. AT ALL WEGMANS starting Mar. 25