

Bathrooms New Looks Abound

How many times have you looked through the pages of a magazine to get ideas for your bathroom remodeling or decorating? They're all beautiful and luxurious, aren't they? Problem is they're not practical. They're just not designed for the average home.

So when you get around to actually doing your remodeling, you must be realistic and look for the things that fit your life style, budget and space available.

Any type of home but just because you've got an average home, that doesn't mean you have to sacrifice storage space — good lighting — or high style decor. And that's why the editors of Better Homes and Gardens magazine, in cooperation with Eljer Plumbingware, developed eight new bathrooms designed for the average home.

These new designs use standard, locally available materials, and proper plumbing fixtures for an easy to build, attractive new bathroom for most any home.

New designs

Some of the unique designs are called: Shades of Old Glory with a striking red, white and blue design; the Classical Bath utilizing arches and globe lighting; and A Touch of the Tropics with a grass cloth backdrop.

Two of the more popular designs are called Barnwood Galore and The Sauna Bath.

Barnwood Galore utilizes barnwood siding and wooden shutters. It's a unique, striking use of building materials not normally used for bathroom construction. Shutters are used for the vanity, and larger shutters create an unusual shower door.

It is a five-foot by 10-foot compartmental bathroom design with a sliding pocket door separating the lavatory area from the tub/toilet area.

The Sauna Bath looks like the traditional sauna because the traditional materials have been used — redwood planks for the walls and ceiling with beams stained for contrast. This design fits into a five-foot by eight-foot area.

All of the eight new bath designs are described in a free, new 24-page full color booklet titled "Eight great cures for the common bathroom," available from Eljer wholesalers and contractors or by writing Eljer Plumbingware, Wallace-Murray Corporation, Dept. 58GC, 3 Gateway Center, Pittsburgh, Pa. 15222.
