

Kids Love Stella Maris

"My son loves camp and looks forward to next year," one parent wrote to Father Joseph D'Aurizio, executive director of Catholic Charities and director of Camp Stella Maris. The letter reportedly typified the enthusiastic response of campers and parents to last year's program at Stella Maris.

Father D'Aurizio termed the 48th season "the best ever," explaining that the goal of providing a Christian living experience was really emphasized.

Camp Stella Maris on Conesus Lake offers a full program of sports, crafts, and waterfront activities with accommodations for 160 children a week. Three summer weeks are reserved for boys, aged 7 to 14, and three weeks for girls. Most campers attend one or two weeks.

The youngsters come from all over the diocese, with a few coming from outside the diocese or even out of state, Father D'Aurizio said. Each week of camp 10 children from the inner-city in Rochester are sent to camp free and 10 from Monroe County are sponsored half by the county and half by Catholic Charities.

"We do need people's contributions to help with this program," Father D'Aurizio stated. He added that the mixing of children from all different backgrounds enriches the camping and Christian experience.

Male counselors are students from Becket Hall and St. Bernard's Seminary. Female counselors have completed the counselor-in-training offered at camp. The ratio between campers and counselors is approximately 6 to 1.

Father D'Aurizio said that the camp, always influential in the forming of vocations, is expected to play an expanding year-round role in family and teen renewal movements, providing economical facilities for retreats, since the recent winterization of much of the campgrounds.

The camp will hold an open house on Sunday, June 1, from 2-6 p.m. The public is invited to tour the facilities and meet the staffs of both the boys' and girls' encampments.
