Do you think the Catholic Church should discontinue its celibacy rule?

AQUINAS

John Regan, senior, Student Council

"Personally I feel it has its practical use in that the church at present is unable to support large families or any type of family that a priest may decide to have. However, it (celibacy) does narrow down the number of people interested in vocations."

Roger Benton, senior... "I don't think the celibacy rule should be dropped. Because of the high cost in raising families it is more beneficial for the religious to remain celibate, and also not being married they have more time to devote to their vocation."

Steve Gosnell, junior, football

"I don't think so. They never have been before — they shouldn't be now. If a man wants to be a priest he'd join anyway. Celibacy has no bearing on the problem of declining vocations."

Fred Barton, freshman, basketball

"Yes, I do. I don't see anything wrong in them marrying. You would find more men interested in the religious vocations if they could become married."

Bob Pelle, senior, wrestling

"I think if you're not allowed to get married you're not experiencing a certain facet of life that is important. You are not a complete person if you want to get married and can't. The Church needs new blood, and new ideas, and more people would be apt to take a religious vocation if allowed a married life."

Tom Proctor, freshman, football

"Yes, I do. I don't think priests should be different from other people. Churches are being closed down because of not enough priests. The dropping of the rule would bring more priests into the business."

Jim Rogers, sophomore, wrestling

"I do think every man should have a right to marriage even though he's serving the Church. Being allowed to get married would increase the numbers of those who want religious vocations."

Mike Katafiaz, sophomore

"Yes. If the guy's going to dedicate himself to the Church he should be allowed to be married. A lot of people have to give up so much they decide they don't want the vocation."

Musical Journey

The Kearney Singers, a segment of the school's glee club, will be participating in the "Musical Montage '75" to be presented at Bishop Kearney on May 30 at 8 p.m. The show will consist of music from medieval to modern times and will include such selections as "The Entertainer", "Tammy", and "Halleluja Chorus".

In Honor of Our Lady

The ceremonies will be held in the auditorium, and will include praying the rosary, hymn singing, and meditations. The young adults who will participate are representative of the school, athletic and language clubs as well as the music department.

The Rosary, to which the public is invited, is coordinated by Edward Nietopski, and is presented twice a year — May and October.
