AS I SEE IT

Pat Costa

At our house on a Sunday night, "The Six Million Dollar Man" wins hands down over "Cher" but I was somewhat surprised to find that a recent ratings announcement shows that it is the case in a great many other American homes. In fact, out of 60 TV shows, ABC's "Man" is in the top ten while "Cher" which is seen at the same time on CBS skidded uncomfortably close to the bottom of the pile.

I've been watching bits and pieces of the saga of Steve Austin, former astronaut, for months but during a recent episode settled down for the full hour to watch the bionic man. According to my dictionary bionics is a term meaning how man performs certain tasks and of the, application of the findings to the design of computers and other electronic devices. (Incidentally you can ask any grade school youngster and get a better definition, at least in relation to the series). Bionics is a combination of the words biology and electronics.

What's the big attraction for today's kids? Well, after watching Lee Majors as the bionic man leap up to a third floor window and then down again to save Sonny Bono from an espionage ring it dawned that "Six Million Dollar Man" is this generation's Superman.

There are a few superficial differences. Steve Austin doesn't have Clark Kent's penchant for telephone booths and monogrammed body suits. And the bionic man has fallen in love and even bestowed a few stiff, screen kisses — on a bionic woman, of course.

But that's as far as "sex" appears to have permeated this series. An even happier bonus is that the series does not seem to be big on violence either. Guns and other such weapons are seldom used. I saw a couple of blows to the head the night I watched but the victims promptly recovered. There is a good deal of fisticuffs and giving chase all of which is done in slow motion to suggest super speed, a technique I do not pretend to understand.

Plots seem to exist only as a showcase for one super feat after another. It's strictly kid fare but nobody is counting how old the kids are.

At least one critic has called the present TV season the most mediocre ever. It's difficult to find fault with the evaluation but at the same time I've managed to find some worthwhile and even thought provoking fare in the past few weeks. The best was the Xerox presentation of the John Henry Falk trial about black listing in the Fifties. I'd read attorney Louis Nizer's book some years ago and the TV production added still another dimension to the shameful story. Also interesting was the TV movie, "Katherine" the very contemporary story of a young revolutionary.

Anti-ERA Leader To Speak Here

Mrs. Phyllis Schlafly, a leader in the fight against the Equal Rights Amendment, will speak at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 19, at St. Pius X, 3032 Chili Ave. Her appearance here is sponsored by the local chapter of Operational Wake Up, an affiliate of Stop ERA. Mrs. Schlafly is national chairman of the latter.

She is a writer and lecturer who has appeared frequently on television in the course of her campaign. She is a wife and the mother of five children, and, in the words of the meeting announcement, "believes that ERA takes away special rights and privileges that women enjoy as women, and as mothers, wives and employees."
