

All Must Be Evangelizers

Vatican City [RNS] — Pope Paul VI in a major new document on evangelization, said that all members of the Church, by very reason of their being part of the community of Christ, must be "evangelizers" and proclaim the Good News of salvation of all the world.

The 116-page document, an Apostolic Exhortation, entitled "Evangelii Nuntiandi" (On Announcing the Gospel) was addressed to bishops, clergy, and faithful throughout the world. It examined links between evangelization and liberation, condemned violence as a road to social justice, and encouraged renewed efforts to bring the Christian message to non-Christians and to non-believers.

While appealing for "missionary fervor" on the part of all the faithful, the Pope distinguished between imposing the truth — which is never to be permitted — and proposing the truth, which is a "duty of love towards others and a mark of respect for their liberty."

The pontiff also underscored the importance of non-ordained ministries in evangelistic activities, and insisted that evangelization is always an ecclesial act performed in the name of the Church.

At the same time, he emphasized that "an essential dimension of evangelization" was "care for preserving the unity of ecumenical efforts" and "love for those being evangelized and respect for their traditions."

In the section of the document dealing with the question of the relationship between preaching the Gospel and following out its social implications — a matter of pressing concern especially in underdeveloped countries — Pope Paul reiterated his total rejection of violence as a valid means of achieving social justice.

"The Church," he said, "cannot accept violence, especially the force of arms and indiscriminate death as the path to liberation, because she knows that violence always begets violence and irresistibly engenders new forms of oppression and enslavement."

According to a Vatican Radio comment, Pope Paul's new Apostolic Exhortation, which was dated Dec. 8, 1975, served to mark three events: the closing of the Holy Year, the 10th anniversary of the close of the Second Vatican Council, and the fourth World Synod of Bishops, which met at the Vatican in late 1974 on the theme "Evangelization in the Modern World."

'Brain Death' Measure Proposed

New York [RNS] — A New York State law making "brain death" a standard for legal death is needed, according to most of more than three dozen witnesses testifying at a legislative hearing.

Most supported in principle a bill by Assemblyman Herbert Miller, Queens County Democrat. It would allow a physician to declare a person dead if, according to standards of current medical practice, there is an irreversible cessation of heart and lung functions, or if the brain and either the heart or lungs have irreversibly stopped functioning.

Dissenting was A. Lawrence Washburn Jr., speaking for the New York State Right to Life Committee. He said his group opposed "depriving the doctor of his unfettered medical judgment regarding the time of death."

Washburn said the bill, was backed by organ transplant proponents, who want healthy organs. I have sympathy for them, but you may not pull the plug on the first patient in order to make the transplant for the second patient.

Supporting "brain death" as a death indicator were Visgr. Charles J. Fahey of the New York State Catholic Conference, and Rabbi James Perman of the Central Conference of (Reform) American Rabbis.

Dr. Richard L. Burleson of the Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse said, "We are not talking about some brain damage, or unconsciousness or coma, but rather 'about a dead brain.'"

He said that after brain damage, heart and lung functions may cease within minutes without machine assistance, too soon for physicians to determine whether the brain damage is irreversible.

Dr. Burleson said physicians are reluctant to use the machines, however, because they have no legal sanction to turn them off if the brain turns out to be dead.

Dr. Richard Masland, former professor of neurology at Columbia University, said the present law is "archaic."

Last Spring, a New York State judge ruled that "brain death" is the legal end of life. In the absence of a state statute on the subject, however, that ruling does not bind other state judges. The traditional rule of common law is that life continues so long as breathing and heartbeat do.

Children already in the program need not be registered again. The office, at 64 Maiden Lane, will be open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. through Jan. 9. The first semester ends Jan. 23, and the new one begins Jan. 26.

CBS' decision to schedule "60 Minutes" at 7 p.m. Sunday nights opposite "Walt Disney" on NBC and "Swiss Family Robinson" on 13 is deplored here.

Ostensibly screened at that time to give adults a choice other than "Kid Fare," the show, which is the very best regular news-oriented program on the air, gets short shrift at our house. Early Sunday evening is family viewing time and it is easier on the nerves to give way to the cherubs than try to convince them that Mike Wallace et al. have something to interest everybody.

On the other hand late night viewing (that is 10 to 11 p.m.) on Sundays has never been anything to write home about on any of the three major networks. It still isn't — with "Ellery Queen" reset for NBC, movies of varying quality on ABC, and the ponderous "Bronk" on CBS. CBS could score with "60 Minutes" in that time slot if it would chance it.

Danish Film Draws CDC Opposition

The filming of a Danish movie titled "The Love Life of Jesus Christ" has drawn the attention of Citizens for a Decent Community. They are protesting the Danish Government's $278,000 grant for the production of the pornographic and anti-religious film.

The thrust of the CDC protest is a prayer campaign for the conversion of Denmark as well as reparation for the blasphemy the film represents.

Magazine quotes a Dr. David Love of UCLA as saying that television violence can have a "pernicious effect" on the minds of adults as well as children. Even more interesting, however, is the theory put forth by Ms. Smith that people pick the shows that fit their tastes and therefore it may be the aggressive viewer who chooses mayhem, not the mayhem which converts the viewer. This should be grist for the mill for all those researchers attempting to assay the effect of cartoons, for example.

The next time I begin to denigrate the rerun I promise to remind myself that there are exceptions. Over the Christmas weekend I took advantage of the repeat showing of "This House of Brede" starring Diana Rigg as a middle aged woman who becomes a Benedictine nun. It was a light shining brightly in the dark recesses of a Holiday TV schedule.

Count me among those who've been enjoying Channel 13's Saturday night late movies. The oldies but goodies shown under the title "Golden Theatre" are mainly Goldwyn films: "Guys and Dolls" with Marlon Brando; Jean Simmons and Frank Sinatra and "Roseanna McCoy" were two that made me nostalgic for the movie days of my youth. And what a revelation! I had no idea the first time around just how badly a tune could fare in Brando's hands or vocal chords. Anyway the off key duets with him and Simmons diminished the pleasure not at all.

He is the author of "Buddhism, 1967; The Religions of India, 1971; and recently published another book on China. This will be Dr. Berry's fourth year as a guest lecturer for the series.

The CDC hopes to stop the filming through an economic boycott, urging people not to purchase Danish goods. They also have sought the help of Arab governments. The late King Faisal of Saudi Arabia once stopped the movie's filming by threatening an oil embargo, according to the CDC. Islamic leaders revere Christ as a holy prophet, and the CDC hopes that either Faisal's successors or other Arab countries can be persuaded to threaten an oil supply cutoff to force withdrawal of the grant.
