

Dependable, Well-Behaved John

This is the story of John. He is one of The Children Who Wait, one of more than 1000 children registered with the New York State Adoption Exchange, one of more than 200 "hard to place children" the Council of Adoptive Parents (CAP) is trying to find a permanent home for.

His story, in the CAP Book reads:

"John is 12 years old.

"He has dirty blond hair and hazel eyes. He is slender in build. He is a dependable, well-behaved boy with a good sense of humor.

"His activities include bowling, riding his bike, and playing with his dog, Murdock. He gets along well with others and is very helpful. John is in an educable mentally retarded class. He has had ear surgery to correct a minor defect and has hay fever periodically.

"John needs a family who can offer love, warmth, security, and stimulation."

Children are considered hard to place for a variety of reasons. Some have mental, physical and/or emotional problems, some are older. The age range for The Children Who Wait runs from infancy through early teens. Some children are from a minority race and some are racially mixed. Some are sibling groups who should not be separated.

The one thing they all have in their necks winging their way into what they must have thought was a free and clear passageway to the new world.

In spite of having two sliding glass doors only four feet apart in our kitchen-family room, no feathered creature, nay no gnat, has ever been deceived as to the uncompromising nature of the glass so careful have I been to keep intact small fingerprints, the earmarks of a peanut butter and jelly sandwich mightily enjoyed, the swipes of snowy mittens.

After absorbing the import of this non-act of mine, the whole spectrum of my compassionate nature burst forth upon me.

The reason I did not iron my kids' shirts and blouses, of course, was that the spray starch might cause rashes to rise on their tender necks. When they demand apple pie and are given apples instead it is not that pie making is time-consuming but rather that raw apples are so good for them.

I clean my oven only twice a year because who knows what those horrible fumes from the caustic cleaners do to our lungs and the atmosphere.

Ditto for ecological considerations in overuse of the vacuum cleaner. No one could accuse me of wasting energy in daily sorties with the Hoover upright.

Ah, my own beneficent nature astounds me. I'm sure I can add to these few examples with lists of others. All I have to do is look around.

common is the need for an adoptive family.

In years past there was a great emphasis on placing healthy infants in adoptive homes. Today however, a special drive is underway to find loving and secure homes for children like John.

Persons considering adoption of The Children Who Wait should know of the dramatic change in adoptive patterns in recent years. Today both couples with large families and singles are taking these children into their homes.

Children are being placed across religious and racial lines. Financial subsidies are available to ease the burden of adoption. The basic requirement is a loving, caring environment that can meet the needs of the children.

For general information about adoption, the following agencies should be contacted:

Catholic Family Center, 546-7220; Monroe County Department of Social Services, 442-4000; Northaven, Inc., 266-4330; the Council of Adoptive Parents (CAP), 288-7989.

ALL IN THE FAMILY

Sarah Child

Not too long ago I read a National Safety report that waxed floors in the home accounted for a stupendous number of serious accidents.

"At last," I cried upon reading that astounding bit of information "someone realizes that I have not been so such the slothful one as a guardian of life and limb, a watchdog of the physical well being of family and friends."

Dwelling on my own thoughtful concern I reminded myself that no one need ever worry about breaking a leg at our house on that score — falling over clutter, yes and our youngest did sustain just such a fracture trying to do a broad jump off my bed. But waxed floor — never.

So pleased with myself, I began looking around the house and immediately realized I hadn't even scratched the surface of my own humanness.

In one of the houses we lived in when I was a child, there was a picture window which had been installed in the dining room to modernize and help lighten the dark corners of the old Victorian style structure. My mom kept that window so sparkling clean that three or four birds per year broke
