Do you think marriage as the traditional life style is declining.

OUR LADY OF MERCY

Christy Laws, junior, drama club . . . "Yes, I think it is. I also think a lot of girls aren't getting married because they want the opportunity to go out and discover new things right after high school. They want to do what they want, and be independent. Women's Liberation has something to do with how they feel. Now, they don't have to be tied down to marriage."

Jean Marie Hill, junior, drama club . . . "Definitely. Women want to know a man before they get married so they live together. I think it's a terrible idea. It's the worst thing that could happen. Marriage is a sacrament and should stay that way. I think marriage is going along with what God planned for us. Just living together is a situation that doesn't last."

Dona Wong, sophomore . . . "Yes, it is declining. The younger people are more informal so they live together and then when they feel like it they split. Most young adults don't want to accept the commitment of being tied down to one person because they see married people getting so many divorces."

Ginny Knouf, junior, Glee Club . . . "I feel it's not just the young people who are living together but also the older generation. I prefer marriage but for some people it may be what they want and need. What brought this situation about was Women's liberation which gives the woman a chance to do what she wants to do and not be tied down to commitments. Everything is much more free now with people beginning to get out and do what they want. However, I think most people want marriage for the stabilized life style it offers."

Mary Conti, senior . . . "I think it's losing ground but it's not totally lost. I think people are living together to get to know each other so when they marry it's a more permanent relationship. So, if there's any life style that will go out of fashion it will be divorce. The younger generation has brought this situation about because they see the tremendously high divorce rates."

Rita Forsythe, senior, Glee Club . . . "I think among the young adults, marriage is losing ground. I think a lot of them prefer living together. I know a lot of young people and I think it's because they are too immature for marriage that they opt for living together as a cop-out. They don't have to make commitments to one another and then they can leave whenever they want."

Ann Meagher, freshman, United Nations Club . . . "I think in many places it is because many young adults don't want to take the responsibility of raising a family together or of being tied down. Personally, I want to get married, but if other people wish to live together that's their business."

Kathy O'Donnell, sophomore . . . "I don't feel it's losing ground. People are getting married at a younger age and therefore, there are a lot more divorces because the marriages aren't working out. They're still getting married though because that's what they really want rather than just living together."

Film Seminar Scheduled For High Schoolers

Over 300 high school student filmmakers and their instructors will gather at St. John Fisher College on Tuesday, March 16 to learn cinematic techniques, view student films, and exchange ideas at Film Factory '76.

According to Dennis O'Brien, assistant director of media at Fisher and director of Film Factory, the program will include for the first time this year special workshops for film instructors, how to teach film production, how to stimulate creativity, and an examination of new directions in film studies.

Professionals working in various areas of filmmaking will offer continuous workshops and seminars from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Among those offering workshops will be Gerardo Puglia, cinematographer at Channel 21, Paul daSilva, writer, producer and filmmaker, and Robert Trussell, a local independent filmmaker.

Film Factory will include sessions in sound production, lighting, editing, scripting, Super-8 sound and animation techniques, and screenings of student films.

Co-sponsors of Film Factory this year are Fisher's Media Department and Cinemedia Resource Center. Advance registration is required. For further information call Fisher's Media Center, 586-4140, extension 310.

Lady Saints Here to Stay

By CHRIS LAVIN

Last year, Women's Liberation invaded the DeSales High School sports program. Girls became tired of their cheerleader role and sought the limelight for themselves. Subsequently, a girls basketball program was started, the first in DeSales' history.

In their first year the Lady Saints captured the Wayne Finger Lakes title with a 7-1 record. This year the schedule has been expanded to 14 games.

The 1976 version of the Lady Saints presently has a 5-2 record and is in second place. This slip in league position over last year can't be attributed to a weaker team. In fact, the Lady Saints are possibly stronger then last year. Girls' basketball, however, has become more competitive.

The Saints are led by 5'7" Jody Lavin who averages 25 points per game and is the Saints' leading rebounder. She is the team leader and receives help with the scoring duties from 5'5" Andi Venuti who averages 15 points per game.

The Lady Saints is a young team. There is only one senior on this year's team and the girls who will come from the grammar school teams will give the Saints a big lift in the future.

The Lady Saints still have a chance to win the league title this season but they will have to improve their defense to do so. They hope to finish their regular season on the strong side, and then carry it through into the sectionals.

With the experience this young team is getting, and the fine grammar school players who will join the team in the future it will make the ladies from DeSales a power to reckon with in the future.

Aquinas Hosts Area Idea Bank

Area Catholic schools administrators and pastors from Nazareth Academy, Aquinas Institute, Sacred Heart Cathedral, Nazareth Hall, Holy Rosary, St. Anthony's, Most Precious Blood and Holy Apostles-Holy Family have been meeting two or three times a year to share ideas and common interests and to work together in their educational planning for the benefit of their students.

An afternoon meeting was held at Aquinas on Feb. 25 with the ninth grade teachers and chairmen of the English, Social Studies, Math and Science Departments of Nazareth and Aquinas and the Junior High teachers of those subjects from all the city Catholic elementary schools.

Each subject area group shared its plans of curriculum development and offered suggestions for a better integrated program.

College Awards Announced

Jacqueline McCormick a senior at Geneva DeSales High School, and Fiona O'Connor of Notre Dame High School in Elmira will be admitted to Trinity College in Washington, D.C. as Presidential Scholars.

The Presidential Scholarship Program which recognizes outstanding achievement in both the academic and non-academic worlds was instituted in recognition of Trinity's Seventy-fifth anniversary.
