AS I SEE IT

Pat Costa

You say the winter has been too long and too hard and you've been spending far too much time in front of the television set and if you watch one more detective show or one more situation comedy or one more variety show you're going to go bananas?

Well, I'm with you. Therefore I've put together a list of activities you can follow through the next week which are at least as exciting as watching a baldhead cop sucking a lollipop or a couple of teenyboppers with a mouth full of gleaming teeth attempt to pull off old vaudeville routines that even George M. Cohan shouldn't have tried. And what's more all offer more exercise than chewing your fingernails as you wait breathlessly to see if Rhoda's mother is really going to elope with Carlton, the doorman.

So, here we go, night by night.

Sunday: Go down to the basement and pull out all your National Geographics as far back as 1965. Sort out all the ones containing stories about the South Seas or other tropical climates. Reserve them for perusing during the middle of April when we get our annual unofficial blizzard. Have the kids place the others end to end around the rest of the downstairs and you can take turns jogging on top on them through the house with penalties imposed for "stepping on a crack."

Monday: Take all the National Geographics except the reserve pile back to the basement two at a time running up and down the steps for maximum calorie expenditure of 10 cal. per min. On the last trip down, check out the pile of old high school yearbooks in the corner and see if your kids can recognize you in your calf length felt skirt with the poodle and cardigan sweater worn backwards or the D.A. haircut and cuffed blue jeans.

Tuesday: Get out the typewriter and with your left hand only and in the manner of Hemingway (standing up) compose a letter to your old Army buddy whose Christmas card you didn't reciprocate, your Aunt Myrtle who sent the kids those adorable knitted purple leopards or a love letter to Doc and Katy Abraham who deserve one for all the common sense garden help they've given you over the years.

Wednesday: Write — this time in long hand — to three hotel clerks of Lake Placid establishments asking for a room during the 1980 winter olympics for under $75 a day. Ask for immediate confirmation. The answers will give you new respect for the economical and practical aspects of your much-maligned TV set.

Thursday: Go to the attic, get out the set of oils you bought that time you wanted to discover yourself. Paint a self portrait a la Modigliani.

Friday: Get out the Fanny Farmer, Betty Crocker or New York Times Cookbook and find a recipe for home baked bread. Start at 7 p.m. You will finish at 2 a.m. But the house will still smell wonderful the next morning when everybody gets up even if you flop. Even poor homemade bread has a great aroma.

Saturday: Set up the sewing machine. Trace a pattern on paper bag and then cut out and sew spaghetti bibs for the whole family. Then some spaghetti.

SUNDAY SERIES

St. Monica parish has scheduled a discussion series for the Sunday mornings of Lent centering on sin, forgiveness and reconciliation. Child care will be provided during the meetings, which begin at 11 a.m.
