What is your opinion on this nation's Bicentennial celebration?

McQUAID

Bob Burke, freshman, football

"I think the bicentennial celebration is good for the American people because it is getting their spirit up like it was during World War II so, I'm in favor of the celebration. Some businesses are taking advantage of the celebration. Instead of trying to make money we should try to fix up the country's problems. I think too much money is being spent on the commercial side instead of being used to solve problems."

Rudi Dasta, freshman, track

"I think it's too commercial. A lot of businesses are taking advantage by using the opportunity to make money off it. It's good to celebrate but not in the way this celebration has become. I think what they've done in commemorative coins is a good idea. In a way I think they started the bicentennial too early and people are becoming bored with it. I feel things like the Freedom Train were a big ripoff."

John Howe, freshman

"I think it's largely overplayed. It's being abused by manufacturers and advertisers for economic reasons. I feel they started the festivities early because the more time celebrating the more money they could make. There's really no worthwhile project involved with the celebrations unless there are things which promote for environmental purposes."

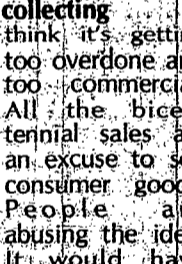

George Falcon, freshman, track

"I'm glad the people are celebrating the Bicentennial because it is important, but it's been overdone a lot. They're doing too many expensive things. The Freedom Train was really good and what they've done on the back of our coins like putting the 'Spirit of 76' on the back of the quarter, and Independence Hall on the half dollar is a good idea. After it's all over people will look back on it as a worthwhile remembrance."

Steve LaSalle, freshman, stamp collecting

"I think it's getting too overdone and too commercial. All the bicentennial sales are an excuse to sell consumer goods. People are abusing the idea. It would have been better if they had done it on a smaller scale. I liked the Freedom Train because it gave you an idea of what our history is like."

Tim Calabrese, freshman, soccer

"I don't think they should spend so much on it. They should spend the money on solving world problems. I think things like the Freedom Train are a good idea. I also like the bicentennial minutes on TV because you learn about the country's history."

Kelvin James, freshman

"I think they are overdoing it in a sense. They are making a big issue out of it. I think it's a money making proposition rather than a sincere and patriotic celebration."

Mike Buggie, freshman, track and field

"I think people overdo it too much like the big crowds turning out for the events. They spend too much money on it. They started the celebration too early and people are becoming bored with it."

Aq Student Wins Merit Award

David R. Collins of LeChase Drive, a senior at Aquinas Institute, has been awarded the American Optical Corporation Merit Scholarship. The grant is the only one offered by the Southbridge, Mass., manufacturer through the National Merit Scholarship Corporation, according to an announcement from the latter.

Collins, whose field is mathematics, has won also a University of Rochester Wilson Scholarship and a Bausch & Lomb award. At school, he has been varsity basketball statistician and a bowler, and is a member of the St. Thomas Club, honor society.

Only corporation-backed scholarships were listed this week by the NMSC.

ND Play Focuses on Song

Under the direction of Mrs. Claire Reidy and James McGill, many of the talented students of Notre Dame presented the spring musical "Sing Out, Sweet Land" on April 9-10.

In this humorous musical biography of American song, Barnaby Goodchild, played by David Broschart, sang and danced his way through America's past, beginning in the days of witchburnings, Barnaby struggled through to present day confusion.

The numerous characters he came in contact with were portrayed by Marie Bergh, Karen Wisniewski, Dan Aber, John Corsi, Tom Curran, Jim Duncan, Kathy Healy, Ann Hosey, David Kunzinger, Margie Lagonegro, Mary Ann Maguire, Claire McCabe, Ruth Micklitsch, Peggy Reidy, Tom Reidy, John Santoro, Mark Seaman, David Szabatura, and Beth Whitaker.

Emilie Broschart accompanied on the piano. Patti Cough and Ruth Micklitsch helped with choreography while Patti Mathew was the chairman of the costume committee. Ann Hosey.

Teacher Honored

Nazareth Academy has nominated Sister Anna de Sales Smead for the Ruth E. Wasley Distinguished Teacher Award. This award is given by the State Association of Foreign Language Teachers in recognition of a language teacher who has spent many years in the classroom.

Sister's "many years" total 60 and her students today still love her and praise her excellent teaching. "I did not enter to teach, but to do as I was told — and I was told to teach," she says with a smile. And she is still teaching and still loving every minute of it!

She earned her B.A. in Latin and Greek at Canisius, where she also studied Spanish, and obtained her M.A. in German from St. Bonaventure University.

Her teaching career took her to four elementary schools — Our Lady of Perpetual Help; St. Mary's Candaigua; St. Peter and Paul's, Elmira, where she served as principal, and St. Ambrose where she taught the school's first graduating class. On the secondary school level Sister taught at De Sales where she found herself teaching the youngsters of her former schoolmates; Aquinas where she taught religion and Latin to boys, and for 25 years at Nazareth Academy where she taught Religion and Social Studies in addition to the Latin she still teaches today.
