Bishop Hogan Urges Voter Registrations, Asks Pastors' Help

Accepting the "moral obligation to take steps to loosen the bonds of apathy" that keep many citizens home on Election Day, Bishop Joseph L. Hogan has proclaimed Sunday, June 13 as a day for voter registration in every parish of the diocese.

In a letter requesting the cooperation of pastors, Bishop Hogan noted that in 1974, 64 per cent of the eligible voters failed to vote. "In one county of our diocese 40 per cent of potentially eligible voters were not even registered," he said.

The registration drive, held in conjunction with the Bishops of New York State, will take advantage of the mail-in registration now possible in New York State.

Each pastor has been asked to name four volunteers to organize the registration effort in his parish. The volunteers will attend regional training sessions.

From May 10 to 23, there will be one seminar in each region, except for two each in Livingston-Steuben and Yates-Ontario-Wayne.

Further information can be obtained from Tim McCowan, (716) 328-6400, or from the regional organizers listed below.

3 Diocesan Jobs Filled

The Pastoral Office announced three appointments Monday to fill vacancies, as of June 23.

Father James M. Moynihan, chaplain at Highland Hospital and former diocesan chancellor, will become pastor of St. Joseph's, Penfield.

Msgr. John F. Duffy, pastor of St. Catherine's, Addison, and former director of the local Propagation of the Faith office, will be pastor of St. Francis, Phelps.

Father Michael J. Mahler, who is completing his three-year priest internship at Holy Apostles, Rochester, will direct the campus ministry at SUC-Geneseo.

All three are Rochesterians.

Father Moynihan, trained in canon law in Rome, spent several years in diocesan administration before taking the hospital post last year. He was appointed to the Diocesan Tribunal in 1961, became secretary to Bishop James E. Kearney in 1963 and was named chancellor in 1967. Father Moynihan was ordained in Rome Dec. 15, 1957, and spent three years as assistant pastor of St. Francis DeSales in Geneva. While with the tribunal, he served also as assistant at Mt. Carmel, Rochester.

Msgr. Duffy went to Addison from St. Mary's, Dansville, his first pastorate. He had been Propagation of the Faith director from 1961 until 1969. He was ordained in 1945 and has served at St. James, Waverly; St. Mary's, Canandaigua; St. Cecilia, Rochester; St. Stephen's, Geneva and Holy Cross, Rochester. He succeeds Father Francis H. Turner, who is retiring.

Father Mahler will be the second full-time Catholic chaplain at Geneseo, following Father Thomas R. Statt, who has been named rector of Becket Hall.

Hospital Display

From 1776 to MASH

By DICK BAUMBACH

Elmira — An unusual hospital display will be unveiled Monday at St. Joseph's Hospital here to bring the country's bicentennial theme to National Hospital Week.

Stanley Douglas, director of community relations for the hospital, said "Two hundred years of American hospital history, from what may have been the first Revolutionary Field Unit to the multimillion dollar MUST, will be on display during hospital week from May 10 to 15."

The Bicentennial Commission-sanctioned project will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the south end of the Market Street parking area at the hospital.

The display will be housed in three Army field tents measuring 31 by 62 feet each. In addition an Army rescue-ambulance helicopter will be on display.

Douglas said one field tent will house the display of a 1776 regimental field hospital, which was built to scale by a conservation class at the Chemung-Schuyler Board of Cooperative Education Services (BOCES).

Douglas said the detail of the scale model is exact to the nearest detail. He said the BOCES students used photographs and paintings to construct the model.

Another field tent will house a complete MASH unit. MASH primarily came to the public's attention in recent years through a major motion picture and a current television series, both bearing the title MASH.

The MASH unit, which stands for Mobile Army Surgical Hospital, is being brought by the Department of Army.

Douglas said St. Joseph's Hospital almost ended up with a complete MUST unit, which stands for Mobile Unit Surgical Transportable, through the efforts of Pentagon officials. However, Army officials stationed with one of the MUST units in the South said because the unit had to be ready to move on a moment's notice the displaying of it could hamper the overall hospital week project if it had to be removed quickly.

So instead of the actual unit, as is the case with MASH, a film on the MUST unit will be shown.

The list of displays is long, Douglas said. He added that 200 off-duty hospital employees will be joined by members of the hospital's volunteer corps to serve as guides for the displays.

Exhibits including actual medical instruments reportedly used 200 years ago during the Revolutionary War period and photographs of equipment not available also will be part of the display.

Co-chairmen for the observance are Thomas Costello, RN, an instructor of the hospital's School of Nursing, and Frank Palmer, a medical technologist in the hospital's laboratory.
