Who do you want as the Republican nominee for president, and then who would be your choice for president?

BISHOP KEARNEY

Ragina Sementino, senior, softball

"I guess Reagan because I don't feel Ford is doing a good job. If he cared about the country he'd try to defeat the recession and obtain jobs for the people who have been laid off. I would rather see a Democrat president because the Republicans seem to cater to the wealthy. My feelings are that they are not for the little people."

Chris Hoffman, freshman, soccer

"I'd like to see Reagan as the Republican nominee. I don't think Ford has done a very good job. Before he was appointed the economic status was pretty good, and then after he got into office inflation happened. I would like to see Reagan as president so as not to change political party leadership in the White House at this time."

Joe Saurini, sophomore, hockey

"Personally, I would like to see Ford as the Republican nominee because then Carter would have a better chance to win. Initially I wanted to see Wallace as president but seeing as he isn't doing too good, Carter would be my next choice because I'm a Democrat."

Dave Tuccio, sophomore, soccer

"I feel the country will stick behind Ford because he's been in office. He has more experience and within a next term he'll be able to do more. We don't know what Reagan will do if he gets into office. We'll be taking a chance where with Ford we know what he has done."

Joe Giaconia, sophomore

"I want Reagan to win the republican nomination because I feel that since Ford was an appointed president people would like a change. But I would want Jimmy Carter for president. From the primaries I've seen I like Carter's views. He sounds like a pretty good man to me."

Joe Kolb, sophomore

"I want to see Ford take the Republican nomination and then win the election because he's done a pretty good job for the country especially since he's had the experience in office for the last few years. I think the people will want him to stay in the presidency because he has done a pretty good job."

Patty O'Brien, freshman

"Reagan, because Ford is just an appointed president and not an elected one. I don't think it was fair the way he became president on Nixon's troubles and I don't think he has done a good job. I don't feel he has a strong enough personality to run the office for another four years."

John Cronin, sophomore, Coronet staff

"I'd like to see Ford win because he's been doing a lot for the country. I feel he's got a fair shot at getting the nomination. I look at it this way, I'd pick him as president and not Reagan because he's been doing a great job for the country."

Aquinas Names Basketball Head

Edward Mancuso has been named head varsity basketball coach at Aquinas.

Mancuso joined the Aquinas staff in September 1972 as a math teacher and JV basketball coach, positions which he still holds at Aquinas. His knowledge of the game, his rapport with the students and the confidence of the faculty in his ability as a coach made Mancuso the choice of the School's Administrative Council.

He is also the head varsity track coach whose teams hold three City-Catholic Championships and four undefeated seasons in dual competition. He is an assistant football coach as well.

From Student to Police Chief

Nazareth Academy junior Linda Fischer suddenly found herself "Police Chief for a Day" when she participated in the annual "Student Day in Government" April 28.

Mayor Thomas Ryan and City Manager Elisha Freedman met the students at the City Hall at 9 a.m. and explained the workings of a City Council meeting. From 10 until noon the students participated in a mock council meeting during which they discussed several resolutions.

At noon, Police Chief Thomas Hastings accompanied Linda to the Chamber of Commerce luncheon and introduced her to her role for the day. Chief Hastings explained the structuring of the police department and some of its programs.

After lunch, Linda toured police headquarters in the Public Safety Building. At Communications, she observed how calls are received and dispatched to patrol cars. She was astonished to see how a computer was able to trace her father's automobile license in a matter of minutes. Linda had a look at the sophisticated phone system reserved for emergencies. She was impressed with the need for engraving identification on valuables; articles so marked can be traced so no "good thief" will steal them and no "good fence" will buy them. In the property room Linda saw a huge area crammed from floor to ceiling with stolen articles. If the owners cannot be traced this property must eventually be destroyed.

She was so impressed by the eagerness of all she met to help her learn about their jobs that she commented, "Who knows, maybe someday I'll be a police officer!"

Other selections include Aaron Copland's "Variations on a Shaker Melody," "Highlights from Oliver," and "Chester" by William Schuman. Marches to be featured are "On the Mall," "National Emblem," and "The Thunderer."
